how is sendinig fat folks to an island with no food adovcate killing?
If they get real hungy, they will find something to eat...why are you avoiding the question? I bet you are a fat boy.

Are you fat?
Mark sits on his butt and posts to Usenet all day. He has admitted that he is not physically fit enough to hold a full time job and he has admitted that chopping firewood is too physically demanding for him.

Steve has often referred to Mark as fat boy and Steve wasn't talkin' about a motorcycle, either.
What do you think?

Don't answer the dyslexic fool, Dloyd. You don't owe him anything, much less an answer to anything he asks. He isn't worth your time.

I was hoping he would admit that he is fat, I was going to suggest that perhaps all that lard had migrated to his brain, look what it did to Lloyd.

-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=
-= the BBC, television and radio. -=

The first. incident in June 1990 was when a BBC newsreader made what seemed to be a reaction to something which had happened in. my home, and out of context of what. they were reading. My first reaction was disbelief; nothing of the sort had ever happened before, the idea that. such a thing could occur. had not crossed my mind, yet there was no doubt of what had just taken place. My disbelief eroded as this recurred. time after time. Besides the news, offenders included shows such as. Crimewatch (!), Newsnight, and "entertainment" shows. There seems to be very little. moral understanding among the people who make these programmes; they. just assume they will never be caught, so they carry on without. a thought for the illegality or amorality of what they do. The only time I. ever heard a word raised in doubt was by Paxman being interviewed. by someone else (I think by Clive Anderson) back in. 1990; referring to the "watching" he said it troubled him, and when asked by the host what you could do about it, replied. "Well, you could just switch it off". (meaning the surveillance monitor in the studio). He clearly didn't let his doubts stand in the. way of continued surreptitious spying from his. own or other people's shows, though.

Now you're convinced this is a troll,. aren't you? This story has been the subject of much debate on the uk.* Usenet newsgroups for over. a year, and some readers believe it to be. an invention (it has even been suggested that a group of psychology students are responsible!), others think. it symptomatic of a derangement of the author, and a few give it. credence. Quite a few people do know part or all of. the story already, so this text will fill in the. gaps in their knowledge. For the rest, what may persuade you of the third possibility is that some of the incidents. detailed are checkable against any archives of radio. and TV programmes that exist; that the. incidents involve named people (even if those hiding in the shadows have not made their identity or affiliations evident),. and those people may be persuaded to come out with. the truth; and that the campaign of harassment. is continuing today both in the UK and on the American continent, in a none-too-secret fashion;. by its nature the significant risk of exposure. increases with time.

On several occasions people said to my face that harassment from the. TV was happening. On. the first day I worked in Oxford, I spent the evening in the local pub with the company's. technical director Ian, and Phil, another employee. Ian made a few references to. me and said to Phil, as if in an aside, "Is he the bloke who's been. on TV?" to which Phil replied, "Yes, I think. so".

I made a number of efforts to find the bugs, without. success; last year we employed professional counter-surveillance people to scan. for bugs (see later) again without. result. In autumn 1990 I disposed of my TV and watched virtually no. television for the next three years. But harassment from TV stations has gone on for over six years and continues to this day.. This is something that. many people obviously know is happening; yet the TV staff have the morality of paedophiles,. that because they're getting away with it they feel. no wrong.

Other people who were involved in the. abuse in 1990 were DJs on BBC radio stations, notably. disc jockeys from Radio 1 and other stations (see the following section). Again, since. they don't have sense in the first place they can't be expect to have. the moral sense not to be part of criminal harassment.

PO: >reminds me of BUGS, that new programme on BBC1. on

That's exactly what we did. We went to a competent, professional. detective agency in London, paid them over. 400 quid to debug our house. They used scanner. devices which go to over 1 GHz and would pick up any nearby transmitter in that range,. they also checked the phones and found nothing... but if the tap was at. the exchange, then they wouldn't find anything, would. they?

CS: >Doesn't this suggest to you that there. are, in fact, no bugs to be found?

You can assume that they've done this sort of thing to other. people in more "serious". cases, where they would know the targets would suspect the presence of electronic surveillance. So they. will have developed techniques and devices which are not readily detectable either by. visual inspection or by electronic means. What those techniques. might be, I couldn't guess.

In this case, the. existence of bugging devices was clear from the beginning, and they "rubbed it in". with what was said by the boy on the coach. It was almost as if they. wanted counter-surveillance people to be called in, who they knew would fail to detect the. bugging devices, causing loss. of credibility to the other things I would have to say relating to the harassment.

I did all the things someone in my situation would do to try. to find the bugs. In addition to calling in professional help. using electronic counter-surveillance, I. made a close visual inspection of electrical equipment,. plus any points where audio or video surveillance devices might have. been concealed. Of course, I found nothing. Normal surveillance "mini-cameras" are quite noticeable and require. visible supporting circuitry. It seems to me the best place to put a small. video surveillance device would be additional to a piece of. electronic equipment such as a TV or video. It would be necessary. to physically break in to a property to fit such. a device.

-= Capital Radio - Chris Tarrant. -=

Capital Radio DJs have been "in on it" from the start. One of. the first things I heard in the summer. of 1990 was from a Capital DJ who said, "If he listens to Capital then he can't be. all bad" (supportive, you see. We're not bastards). Much of what came over the radio in 1990 is now. so far away the precise. details have been obliterated by time. No diary was kept of the details, and although archives if they. exist may give pointers, the ambiguity of what broadcasters said. would leave that open to re-interpretation.

In spring 1994, Chris Tarrant on his Capital. morning show made an aside to someone else in the studio, about a person he didn't identify.. He said, "You know this bloke? He says we're trying to kill. him. We should be done for. attempted manslaughter".

That mirrored something I. had said a day or two before. What Tarrant said was understood by. the staff member in the studio he was saying it to; they said, "Oh no, don't say that" to Tarrant. If any archives. exist of the morning show (probably unlikely) then. it could be found there; what he said was so out of context. that he would be very hard put to find an explanation. A. couple of days later, someone at the site where I was working repeated the remark although in a different way; they said. there had been people in a computer room when automatic fire extinguishers went off and. those people were "thinking of suing. for attempted manslaughter".

Finally, this isn't confined to the established. radio stations. In 1990 after I had listened to a pirate radio station. in South London for about half an hour, there was an audible phone call. in the background, followed by total silence for. a few moments, then shrieks of laughter. "So what are we. supposed to say now? Deadly torture? He's going to talk to us now, isn't he?", which meant that they could hear what I would say. in my room.

PM: >supervisor.. OK., Supervisor's salary, say, #30,000 a year. Two men, PM: >#20,000 a year each. But they'd need to work in shifts. -- so it would PM: >be six men. at #20,000 (which with on-costs would work out at more like PM: >#30,000. to the employer.)
PM:. >
PM: >So,. we're talking #30,000 x 6. #180,000. plus say, #40,000 for the PM: >supervisor. #220,000. Then you've got. the hardware involved. And PM: >any. transcription that needs doing. You don't think the 'Big Boss' PM: >would. listen to hours and hours of tapes, do you.
PM:. >
PM: >So, all in all, you couldn't actually do the. job for much less than PM: >a quarter million a year. Over five years. What are you doing. that makes PM: >it worth the while of the state to. spend over one and a quarter million PM:. >on you?

Those are pretty much. the sort of calculations that went through my head once I stopped. to consider what it must be costing them to run this operation. The partial answer is, there have been. periods when the intensity. has been greater, and times when little has happened. In fact, for much of 1993. and the first half of 1994, very little happened. Although I don't think that was for reasons of money - if they can tap. into the taxpayer they're not going to be short of resources, are. they?

The more complete answer is in the enormity of what they're. doing. Relative to the cost to British pride of seeing their country humiliated for. the persecution of their own citizens, isn't is worth the cost of four. or five people to try to bring things to. a close in the manner they would wish? To the government a million or two. is quite honestly nothing - if they can convince themselves of the necessity of what they're. doing, resources will not. be the limiting factor.

It's the classic case. of hitting a cripple to prove you're stronger. Why would the security services expend hundreds of. thousands of pounds and more than six years of manpower to try to kill a British citizen?. Because they are motivated by people who knew me at university and feel. personal animosity; because they knew me to be emotionally weak, and it is in. the nature of bullies to prey on those known to be weak; and because. they can rely on the complicity of the establishment, which the security. services manipulate and derive funding from. Many people know, both in the. establishment and media, and among the general public. Despite an absence. of its target from the UK for more than two years, the echoes of paranoia can still be heard loud and. clear from across the water. When it started in 1990,. the only people who knew were those in BBC television who were spying on my home, and. a few radio broadcasters. There. were a few cases of public harassment, but very little compared. to the situation that developed a couple of years later.

The. list today includes BBC TV staff (newsreaders such as Martyn Lewis, Michael Buerk, Nicholas Witchell), people from radio stations. such as Chris Tarrant of Capital and. Radio 1 DJs, people in the print media, but also many people in the general public. All united. in a conspiracy which breaks the laws which the UK does have regarding. harassment, and all completely uncaring for any semblance of. decency or elementary respect for individual. rights.

The British police (obviously) do know the nature of. the harassment and in all probability the. identity of those behind it. Some time ago I made a complaint to my local police. station in London, without positive result. The UK police are failing in their duty. to see the law enforced in not checking. the abuse.

At the time this. article was written I had believed for some time that columnists in the Times and other. journalists had been making references to my situation. Nothing unusual about this you may think, plenty of. people have the same sort of ideas and. obviously the papers aren't writing about them, so why should. my beliefs not be as false as those of others?

What makes this article so extraordinary is that three or four. days immediately preceding its publication, I had a meeting with a. friend, during the course. of which we discussed the media persecution, and in particular that by. Times columnists. It seemed to me, reading the article by Levin in Saturday's paper,. that he was describing in some detail his "artist's impression" of. that meeting. Although I. did not "burst into tears" (he seems to be using a bit of poetic licence and. exaggerating) I did try hard to convince my friend that it was all true; and I am able to concur. with Mr Levin, because, of course,. it is.

At the beginning of the piece. Levin reveals a fear of being attacked by the "irrational" subject of his story, saying "I have no. reason to believe that he is violent, but he should certainly be approached. with caution". This goes. back to the xenophobic propaganda of "defence" against a "threat" which. was seen at the very beginning of the harassment. The impression of a "madman running loose" who needs. to be controlled through an agency which assigns to itself the mantle. of the "police" is also one which had been expressed. elsewhere.

In the final paragraph of this. extract, his reference to Everyman's Library as having "died a lingering and shameful death a. decade or so ago" shows clearly what sort of conclusion they. wish to their campaign. They want a permanent solution, and as they are prevented. from achieving that solution directly,. they waste significant resources on methods which have been repeatedly. shown to be ineffective for such a purpose.

The British police obviously. do know what is taking place. Besides my interpretations of what. individual officers have said which forces that conclusion, it would be inconceivable for. them to be unaware of something on this. scale.

If they know, then they will know. that the abusers have broken laws in the UK and abroad. Recently the UK introduced laws. against electronic spying which carry. a penalty of several years jail if caught. If the police know illegal harassment. is taking place, and do nothing about it, then they are failing in their. responsibilities.

Last Easter (1995). I went into the local police station in London and spoke to an officer about. the harassment against me. But I couldn't provide tangible evidence; what people said, in many cases. years ago, is beyond proof, and. without something to support my statements I cannot expect a police officer to take. the complaint seriously.

The current situation with. regard to the police is not one which allows a breakthrough. in dealing with the problem. On the one hand, most individual officers at a local police station may not know about the. ongoing assaults, so a. complaint at that level will not yield results. Yet the police as an organisation do know of the. harassment, and they must be aware that a complaint has been made at a police station. So it. is clearly their duty to take preventative action. against the continuing molestation, but because the criminals are operating on behalf of a state agency, the police are. not carrying out their. duty.

-= abuse in set-up situations and. in public -=

Strangers in the street have recognized me on sight many times,. and shown awareness of the current thread of abuse. To give you one. example, in 1992 I was seriously ill, and. a manager at work somewhat humorously said that "it wasn't fair" that. people were bullying me. A few days later, I attended for the. first time a clinic in London as an outpatient, and on my way out was accosted by someone who asked if "they. had paid my fare", with emphasis on. the word "fare". He repeated the word several times in this different context; that they should have paid my "fare", each. time emphasizing the word.

For two and a half years from the time their harassment. started until November 1992 I refused to see a psychiatrist, because I reasoned that. I was. not ill of my own action or fault, but through the stress caused by harassment, and that a lessening of. the illness would have to be consequent to a removal of its immediate cause, in other words a. cessation of harassment. I also. reasoned that since they were taunting me with jokes about mental illness, if I. were to seek treatment then the abusers would think that they had. "won" and been proved "right". Remember, the constant theme of any persecution is, "we must destroy. you because you're X", whether X is a racial or other attribute. In this. case the X was "we persecute. you because you have brain disease". The similarity of this logic to Nazi. attitudes to the mentally ill is striking.

The same manager who'd said "it wasn't fair" asked me in winter 1992. why I didn't seek help from a psychiatrist; was it,. he asked, because "they would think they had won" if. I sought treatment? That was something I'd never said at work... again, taken separately it proves nothing, but. many such things over a period of months. proves conclusively that people in the company knew what was going on, and in quite a lot of. detail.

Usually harassment in. public lacks the level of finesse of "paying your fare". Most people's imagination. does not go beyond moronic parroting of the current term of denigration. That is not surprising given the. average level of the abusers; if they do not. have the intelligence to distinguish wrong from. right then neither will they have the capacity for anything other than mindless repetition of a monosyllabic term. calculated to fit into. their minds.

The first incidents of verbal assault in. public were in again in the summer of 1990, although they increased in frequency and venom. with time. In July 1990 the. first public incident occurred on a tube train on the Northern line. Two men and their girlfriends recognised me; the women sprang. to my defence, saying. "He looks perfectly normal, he doesn't look ill". Their boyfriends of course knew better, and followed the party. line; one of them made reference to an "operation", apparently to work at. the tube station but. implicitly to a visit that I had made to hospital a couple of weeks previously.

In August. 1990 going home from college, soon after getting on a tube train at Gloucester Road I was. followed by a group of four youths, who started a chant of abuse. That they were. targeting me was confirmed by other people in the carriage, one of whom asked the other "who. are they going on at, is it the bloke who. just got on?" to which the second replied "yes, I think so". I was. tempted to reply, but as in every other instance the abusers are enabled. in their cowardice by physically outnumbering the abused; any confrontation would result in my being beaten up, followed by a. complaint to the police that "he attacked. us", and of course he's ill, so he must have been. imagining that we were getting at him. Shitty, aren't they?

But the. shittiness of the four youths on the tube train is as nothing compared to the episode on the National Express coach to Dover. in the summer of 1992. While going on holiday. to the Continent I was verbally set upon. by a couple travelling sitting a few rows behind. The boy did the talking,. his female companion contributing only a continuous empty giggling noise. He spoke loudly to ensure other. people on the coach heard, always about "they" and "this. bloke" but never naming either the abusers or the person he was talking about.. He said "they" had "found somebody from his school, and he was always really. stressed at school". They must have dug deep to find enemies there;. perhaps someone who dropped out of school, someone who didn't do too well later, who was jealous and keen to get. their own back? The boy also said "he was in a bed and breakfast for. only one night and they got him". By a not unexpected coincidence I had. been in a B&B in Oxford a week previously, which. had been booked from work; other things lead me to the conclusion that the company's offices were bugged. for most of the 2 1/2 years that I was. there, so "they" would have known a room in the B&B had been booked. (But I'll bet "they". didn't tell the company's managers their offices were bugged,. did they?).

After a few minutes of this I went. back to where they were sitting and asked. where they were travelling. The boy named a village in France, and the girl's giggling suddenly ceased; presumably it permeated to her. brain cell what the. purpose of the boy's abuse was.

This and. other set-up situations are obviously calculated to provoke a direct confrontation which would bring in the. police, with the abusers claiming that they were the. ones attacked. Again in 1992, outside the house where I was living in Oxford I. was physically attacked by someone - not punched, just grabbed by the coat, with some verbals thrown in for. good measure. That was. something the people at work shouldn't have known about... but soon after a couple of people were. talking right in front of me about, "I. heard he was attacked". The UK police have a responsibility for preventing assault occurring, but they do not seem to take any. interest in meeting that. responsibility. I suppose their attitude is that harassment does not come within. their remit unless it involves physical assault, and they will only become involved once that happens. That is of. course quite the wrong attitude for them to take, but as I now. understand, the police investigate only the crime they wish to investigate; if. they do not take your complaints. seriously then there is nothing you can do to make them take. action.

-=. my response to the harassment -=

My first reaction in 1990/91 was to assume that if. I broke contact then they would not be able to follow and would. lose interest. So I did the things that have been. suggested by other people; I sold my television, stopped. listening to the radio and tried to withdraw away from the sources of abuse. as much as possible. I reasoned that they must have more important things to deal with and that normal people would simply leave me. alone if it were made difficult for them to. continue their harassment.

I reckoned without the sheer. vindictiveness of the abusers. They did not let up but instead "got to" people around. me, mainly people at work, to do their dirty work for them. I went. to see my GP, who refused to believe what he was being told, and refused to. direct me on to anyone who could be of practical assistance. It was not. until three years had passed that the GP admitted the matter was outside his competence. and suggested going to the police.

In the. summer of 1994 we called in counter-surveillance experts from a private detective agency to sweep our. house and telephone for bugging devices. They. conducted a thorough search and found nothing; but as noted above, since the existence of surveillance. was being forced in my face by the harassers, you would expect them to. have taken the possibility of a counter-surveillance sweep. into account when planning the type of devices to. be employed.

In Easter 1995 I made a complaint to my local Police station. in London, but the police. have not expressed any intention to do anything about the continuing harassment. ("we're not saying it's happening and we're not saying it isn't happening" were. the words used). I think the officer I spoke to. at Easter wasn't aware of it happening, although other members of the police force obviously. do know.

From April 1995 until the present time. the matter has been discussed in a lot. of detail on the Usenet (Internet) "uk.misc" newsgroup. That discussion has given birth to the article which you are. now reading. My hopes in posting. to Usenet were that wider publicizing would discourage the security services from continuing. their harassment, and "draw people out" into concurring with the truth of. what was being said. Neither of those have followed, but the discussion has served a purpose in allowing. this structured report to. be created.

my birthday is the 21 of feb 9i'll be 44 then)
i live near Chassell MI, and 43 white married, Bisexual, switch (tend to be a a bit more sub than Dom) who has experenced both sub
and Dom with other Males, but has only been Dom with women, and would really like to try Femdom. Employed but not flush enough to make a ProDom my first choice. i will not deal with solid waste but i think every thing thing else is possible (i hedge because as soon as i think I have heard
it all someone seems to come up with something new) Things i diffinently like are body worship, hot wax, bondage, spanking. i
have
done and enoyed with people really into them watersports, lite bloodlicking (i knew a girl into Vampires ok?) these are things i likely
to enjoy if they trun someone on, but fall flat if the other party(s) aren't real into them, in that vein i will consider and may well get into something i if it really turns you on.

Space Weather News for Dec. 31, 2007
http://spaceweather.com

SOLAR ACTIVITY: The New Year could begin with a bang--or rather a solar flare. A sunspot hidden just behind the sun's eastern limb has unleashed two X-ray flares and a bright CME (coronal mass ejection) in the past 24 hours. This activity could signal the return of large sunspot 978, which has spent the last two weeks transiting the far side of the sun. Today or tomorrow, the sun's rotation should carry the active region over the limb and into view from Earth; then we can evaluate its potential for more flares and CMEs. Visit http://spaceweather.com for images and updates.

HEAVENLY MEETING: Last night, emerald Comet 8P/Tuttle glided by spiral galaxy M33 producing a heavenly scene for astrophotographers around the world. Dozens of photos may be found in Spaceweather's Comet Tuttle gallery: http://spaceweather.com/comets/gallery_tuttle_page4.htm

236. MARKY - THIS IS 4 U

Newsgroup: rec.radio.amateur.policy

Q: How does MARKY know if He's ready for sex?
A: Ask your boyfriend. He'll know when the time is right. When it comes to love and sex, men are much more responsible, since they're not as emotionally confused as women. It's a proven fact.

Q: Should MARKY have sex on the first date?
A: YES. Before, if possible.

Q: What exactly happens during the act of sex?
A: Again, this is entirely up to the man. The important thing to remember is that MARKY must do whatever he tells you without question. Sometimes, however, he may ask you to do certain things that may at first seem strange to you. Do them anyway.

Q: How long should the sex act last?
A: This is a natural & normal part of nature, so don't feel ashamed or embarrassed. After you've finished making love, GAV WILL have a natural desire to leave you suddenly, & go out with his friends to play golf. Or perhaps another activity, such as going out with his friends to the bar for the purpose of consuming large amounts of alcohol & sharing a few personal thoughts with his buddies. Don't feel left out - while he's gone you can busy yourself by doing laundry, cleaning the apartment, or perhaps even going out to buy him an expensive gift. He'll come back when he's ready.

Q: What is "afterplay"?
A: After a man has finished making love, he needs to replenish his manly energy. "Afterplay" is simply a list of important activities for you to do after lovemaking. This includes lighting his cigarette, making him a sandwich or pizza, bringing him a few beers, or leaving him alone to sleep while you go out and buy him an expensive gift.

Q: Does the size of the penis matter?
A: Yes. Although MARKY believes that quality, not quantity, is important, studies show this is simply not true. The average erect male p*nis measures about three inches. Anything longer than that is extremely rare and if by some chance your lover's sexual organ is 4 inches or over, you should go down on your knees and thank your lucky stars and do everything possible to please him, such as doing his laundry, cleaning his apartment and/or buying him an expensive gift.

Q: What about the female orgasm?
A: What about it? There's no such thing. It's a myth.

304. OT Attention fellow amateurs, join the grass roots effort to reclaim RRAP and RRAM from the flames.

Fellow Amateurs, an effort is underway to obtain relief for the group from one of the most problematic hams I have ever seen on the Amateur Radio newsgroups. Most subscribers, including myself, has seen how this group has degraded over the years, but recently, I was made aware in an embarassing manner, of how this behavior is influencing the general public's view of ham radio. This on-going childish behavior on RRAP and RRAM is causing ridicule and harm to the Amateur Radio Service in the U.S. Enough is enough....fellow amateurs we need to stand together and demand that this individual's ISP stop the flood of non-amateur radio posts to usenet.

More information can be viewed at http://stopkb9rqz.blogspot.com/

Thank you

them where he sdays they don't belong ...what a stirerof shit

my birthday is the 21 of feb 9i'll be 44 then)
i live near Chassell MI, and 43 white married, Bisexual, switch (tend to be a a bit more sub than Dom) who has experenced both sub
and Dom with other Males, but has only been Dom with women, and would
really
like to try Femdom. Employed but not flush enough to make a ProDom my first choice. i will not deal with solid waste but i think every thing
thing else is possible (i hedge because as soon as i think I have heard
it all someone seems to come up with something new) Things i
diffinently like are body worship, hot wax, bondage, spanking. i
have
done and enoyed with people really into them watersports, lite bloodlicking (i knew a girl into Vampires ok?) these are things i
likely
to enjoy if they trun someone on, but fall flat if the other party(s)
aren't real into them, in that vein i will consider and may well get into something i if it really turns you on.

just broowing this old post to burn though the cluoter

my birthday is the 21 of feb 9i'll be 44 then)
i live near Chassell MI, and 43 white married, Bisexual, switch (tend to be a a bit more sub than Dom) who has experenced both sub
and Dom with other Males, but has only been Dom with women, and would
really
like to try Femdom. Employed but not flush enough to make a ProDom my first choice. i will not deal with solid waste but i think every thing
thing else is possible (i hedge because as soon as i think I have heard
it all someone seems to come up with something new) Things i
diffinently like are body worship, hot wax, bondage, spanking. i
have
done and enoyed with people really into them watersports, lite
bloodlicking (i knew a girl into Vampires ok?) these are things i
likely
to enjoy if they trun someone on, but fall flat if the other party(s)
aren't real into them, in that vein i will consider and may well get into something i if it really turns you on.

just broowing this old post to burn though the cluoter

Actually, Dave, in fairness to the Colonel, a little Google workshows that he professes a religion, worshipping the pagan flavor of god, and he also likes girls (although his preferences aren't what you'd call exactly mainstream).

why is Dloyd producing fake gay sex ads in my name whenand posting
them where he sdays they don't belong ...what a stirerof shit

my birthday is the 21 of feb 9i'll be 44 then)
i live near Chassell MI, and 43 white married, Bisexual, switch (tend to be a a bit more sub than Dom) who has experenced both sub
and Dom with other Males, but has only been Dom with women, and would
really
like to try Femdom. Employed but not flush enough to make a ProDom my first choice. i will not deal with solid waste but i think every thing
thing else is possible (i hedge because as soon as i think I have heard
it all someone seems to come up with something new) Things i
diffinently like are body worship, hot wax, bondage, spanking. i
have
done and enoyed with people really into them watersports, lite
bloodlicking (i knew a girl into Vampires ok?) these are things i
likely
to enjoy if they trun someone on, but fall flat if the other party(s)
aren't real into them, in that vein i will consider and may well get into something i if it really turns you on.

have
done and enoyed with people really into them watersports, lite
bloodlicking (i knew a girl into Vampires ok?) these are things i
likely
to enjoy if they trun someone on, but fall flat if the other party(s)
aren't real into them, in that vein i will consider and may well get into something i if it really turns you on.

my birthday is the 21 of feb 9i'll be 44 then)
i live near Chassell MI, and 43 white married, Bisexual, switch (tend to be a a bit more sub than Dom) who has experenced both sub
and Dom with other Males, but has only been Dom with women, and would
really
like to try Femdom. Employed but not flush enough to make a ProDom my first choice. i will not deal with solid waste but i think every thing
thing else is possible (i hedge because as soon as i think I have heard
it all someone seems to come up with something new) Things i
diffinently like are body worship, hot wax, bondage, spanking. i
have
done and enoyed with people really into them watersports, lite
bloodlicking (i knew a girl into Vampires ok?) these are things i
likely
to enjoy if they trun someone on, but fall flat if the other party(s)
aren't real into them, in that vein i will consider and may well get into something i if it really turns you on.

thing else is possible (i hedge because as soon as i think I have
heard
it all someone seems to come up with something new) Things i
diffinently like are body worship, hot wax, bondage, spanking. i
have
done and enoyed with people really into them watersports, lite
bloodlicking (i knew a girl into Vampires ok?) these are things i
likely
to enjoy if they trun someone on, but fall flat if the other party(s)
aren't real into them, in that vein i will consider and may well get into something i if it really turns you on.

why is Dloyd producing fake gay sex ads in my name whenand postingthem where he sdays they don't belong ...what a stirerof shit

http://dloydatkb9rqz.blogspot.com/2008/01/from-dloyd-gay-sex-ad.html

my birthday is the 21 of feb 9i'll be 44 then)
i live near Chassell MI, and 43 white married, Bisexual, switch (tend to be a a bit more sub than Dom) who has experenced both sub
and Dom with other Males, but has only been Dom with women, and would
really
like to try Femdom. Employed but not flush enough to make a ProDom my first choice. i will not deal with solid waste but i think every thing
thing else is possible (i hedge because as soon as i think I have heard
it all someone seems to come up with something new) Things i
diffinently like are body worship, hot wax, bondage, spanking. i
have
done and enoyed with people really into them watersports, lite
bloodlicking (i knew a girl into Vampires ok?) these are things i
likely
to enjoy if they trun someone on, but fall flat if the other party(s)
aren't real into them, in that vein i will consider and may well get into something i if it really turns you on.

it all someone seems to come up with something new) Things i
diffinently like are body worship, hot wax, bondage, spanking. i
have
done and enoyed with people really into them watersports, lite
bloodlicking (i knew a girl into Vampires ok?) these are things i
likely
to enjoy if they trun someone on, but fall flat if the other party(s)
aren't real into them, in that vein i will consider and may well get into something i if it really turns you on.

-= why the security services?. -=

You may. ask, why do I think the "they" referred to are the security services? Is there any evidence that there is a single source, as. opposed to a loosely based "whispering campaign" amongst many. people? Even if there is a. single source, is there any evidence that "they" are professional "buggers" as opposed to amateurs, or perhaps people working for a. privately funded. organization?

a) As to the question. of a single source versus something more fragmented; it is quite obvious. that there is a single source from the way the campaign has been carried out. Since things have been repeated. verbatim which were said in my home, there must be one group which does. the watching and listening. Since on several. occasions (mainly during travel) people have been planted in close proximity and rehearsed in what. they were to say, it follows that someone must have done the planning for that, and. again a single source. is indicated.

b). So why couldn't it be amateurs? Why couldn't it be a private organisation, for example a private detective. agency paid to manage the campaign and undertake the technical aspects? Some. detective agencies are unscrupulous as has been. proved on the occasions in the past when they've been exposed or caught; they. too can have access to the bugging technology deployed; and there are reported cases. of MI5 paying private eyes to do their dirty work (against peace campaigners and similar enemies. of the state) on the understanding. that if they were caught then they could deny all knowledge. Why couldn't that be. the case?

The main. factor pointing to direct security service involvement (as opposed to amateurs or. MI5 proxies) is the breadth of their access to the media in particular, and the fact that the television companies are. so involved in the campaign. The. BBC would not directly invade someone's home themselves, since it. would not be within their remit to allocate personnel or financial resources. to do so. An organisation of their stature would not take part in a campaign set up. by private sources. The only people they would take material from would be the. security services, presumably on the assumption that if the cat ever flew out of the bag. yowling it would be MI5 who would take. the consequences.

State sponsorship for. these acts of psychological terrorism is also indicated. by duration; support for over six years for a team of three or four people. would be beyond the means and will of most private sources. The viciousness of. the slanders and personal denigration also points to

MI5; they traditionally "protect" the British state from. politicians of the wrong hue by. character assassination, and in this case are using their tried and tested methods to murder. with words an enemy they have invented for. themselves.

And there are precedents.. Diana and Hewitt were alleged to have been filmed "at it" by an Army intelligence team which had operated. in Northern Ireland, these. allegations were made by someone called Jones who had been on the. team. His statements were denied by the defence establishment who tried to character-assassinate by describing him as. the "Jones twins". Funny. how if you tell the truth, then you must be ill, isn't it? Thought only communists. behaved like that?

Hewitt later said that he'd been spoken to. by someone in the army who revealed the existence of. videotapes of him and Diana, and that the tapes would. be published if any attempt was made by them to resume their association.

Since things have been repeated verbatim which were said in my home, there must be one group. which does the watching and listening. Since on several occasions (mainly during travel) people. have been planted in close proximity and rehearsed. in what they were to say, it follows that. someone must have done the planning for that, and again a single. source is indicated.

b) So why couldn't it be amateurs? Why. couldn't it be a private organisation, for example a private detective agency paid to. manage the campaign and undertake the technical aspects? Some detective agencies. are unscrupulous as has been proved on the occasions in the past. when they've been exposed or caught;. they too can have access to the bugging technology deployed; and there are reported. cases of MI5 paying private eyes to do their dirty work (against peace campaigners and similar. enemies of the state) on the understanding that if they were caught then they. could deny all knowledge. Why. couldn't that be the case?

The main factor pointing to. direct security service involvement (as opposed to amateurs or MI5 proxies) is the breadth of their. access to the media in particular, and. the fact that the television companies are so involved in the campaign. The BBC would not. directly invade someone's home themselves, since it would not be. within their remit to allocate personnel or financial resources. to do so. An organisation of their stature would not take part in a campaign set up by private sources.. The only people they would take material from would be the security. services, presumably on the assumption that if the cat ever flew out of the. bag yowling it would be MI5 who would take the. consequences.

State sponsorship for these acts of psychological terrorism is. also indicated by duration;. support for over six years for a team of three or four people would be beyond the means and will. of most private sources. The viciousness of the slanders and. personal denigration also points to

MI5;. they traditionally "protect" the British state from politicians of the wrong hue by character assassination, and in this case are using. their tried and tested methods to. murder with words an enemy they have invented for. themselves.

And there are precedents. Diana and Hewitt were alleged to have. been filmed "at it" by an Army intelligence team. which had operated in Northern Ireland, these allegations were made by someone called. Jones who had been on the team. His statements. were denied by the defence establishment who tried to character-assassinate by describing him. as the "Jones twins". Funny how. if you tell the truth, then you must be ill, isn't it? Thought only. communists behaved like that?

Hewitt later said that. he'd been spoken to by someone in the army who revealed the existence of videotapes of him. and Diana, and that the tapes would be published if any attempt was made by them to resume. their association.

-= harassment. at work -=

Once I stopped watching television and listening to. the radio at the end of 1990, "they" had to find. other ways of committing abuses. So they took what must be for them a tried and tested route; they get. at you by subversion of those around. you. Since they wouldn't be able to do that with my family or friends, that. meant getting at people in the workplace to be their mouthpieces and do their dirty work. for them.

They supplied my employers in Oxford. with details from what was going on in my private life, and what I and other people had said at my home. and accommodation. in Oxford. So people at work repeated verbatim words which had been said in my. home, and repeated what I'd been doing recently. Often the most trivial things, the ones from your domestic. life, are the ones which. hurt most. One manager in particular at Oxford continuously abused me for ten months with verbal. sexual abuse, swearing, and threats to terminate my employment. After ten months I was forced to seek psychiatric help. and start taking medication, and was away from work for. two months. I spoke later with a solicitor about what had happened at that. company; he advised it was only possible. to take action if you had left the company as a result of harassment, and such an. action would have to be started very soon after leaving.

Over. a year later the same manager picked on another new worker, with even more serious results; that employee tried to commit suicide with. an overdose as a result of the ill-treatment, and was forced to leave. his job. But he didn't take. action against the company, either. Abuse at work is comparable to that. elsewhere in that tangible evidence is difficult to produce, and the abusers will always. have their denials ready when challenged. And even if a court accepts what you say happened,. it still remains to prove that abuse causes. the type of breakdown I had at the end of 1992. In a recent case before a British. court, a former member of the Army brought a case against others who. had maltreated him ten years previously. Although the court accepted that. abuse had occurred, it did not agree that. depressive illness necessarily followed, and denied justice to the. plaintiff.

http://khkb9rqz.blogspot.com/2008/01/dloyd-is-depressing-but.html

There you'll see that Mark has now added W4NTI to the list of people he's falsely reported to Child Protection Services for child sexual abuse.

This Morgan sicko has to go. Complain to Hughesnet or to law enforcement today.

According to Mark, he has already reported K3VR and now W4NTI. In my opinion, Mark reported a crime that he actually commited himself, by first manufacturing a message which would suggest a sec crime involving a child, and then second, by sending it to himself. Caution to those who use their true calls ANYWHERE on the amateur groups. If Mark sees one post that he thinks even remotely came from "dloyd" he will report you too. There is a twisted ham radio stalker among us, and his name is Mark C. Morgan, call KB9RQZ.

Your overly-simplistic "solution" was attempted years ago and it utterly failed. When someone produces enough of a spew to force posts in a news server's spool to be prematurely expired, he's basically involved in a denial of service attack.

The idea that filters can fix a really serious problem has long ago been discredited. You need to rethink your position.

Thanks in advance.

So you admit that at least one of them was falsely reported since both could not be "dloyd", thanks for admitting your crime, reporting false charges to law enforcement, and lauding false charges at an individual.

I have the evidence in my pc and from onair interecepts and from the opions of various hams

OTOH I still have a message signed Dlopyd Lavies and sent in the fashion as other messages from you offering me a kid for sex for money

IIntend to persue that matter

yes it could be a forgery produced by someone that knows you and dislikes you but you insistance that it can only be me convices me that you did indeed send it hoping o maybe entrap me and thus rid the world of a pedophile or some such nobe ded

what you did was a crime I reported it sadly I don't enough to put you behind bars for it as you deserve I hope in time the cops can do so reporting a crime and the list of suspect is not making a false accastion

besides acroding to you nobody listens to me so what is the beef

Good for comparison since I have only sent messages to you one way...and we both know how that was sent, and it wasn't though blogger, as you already said the message was received.

I hope you do, because when LE finds that it was not me, I will never let you live it down.

Please, I have more important things to do..than to worry about doing some noble deed, that is your fantasy role playing screwing with you....superman is dead.. I am not snow bound in a house for 5 months out of the year..

The fact that you keep saying I commited a crime leads me to believe that you manufactured the message yourself as you will stop at nothing to get anyone, like you did to Steve.

But if you did go to LE, I hope they do find the perp...good luck with your quest for both of us.

reporting multiple folks for the same crime over and over is a crime and makes you look like an idiot.

Your opinion counts for nothing...if LE contacts me I will cooperate,
I just won't cooperate with you, you are not LE. They have access to email, the same as you. Why do you think LE does not have the resources it takes to contact me? I believe that LE is much better equipped than you.

Because, you said I made it and I didn't that means it is based on a forgery, which I believe was purported by you..and you have falsely accussed at least one person by reporting two folks for doing the same crime...so someone is being falsley accused by you....but why don't you follow your own advice...you reported it to LE, let them handle it, why do you think you are better equiped than LE? Why do you keep drilling RRAP with the same shit over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and
and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over andover and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and

Space Weather News for Jan. 3, 2008
http://spaceweather.com

METEOR SHOWER: Earth is about to pass through a stream of dusty debris from near-Earth asteroid 2003 EH1, producing the annual Quadrantid meteor shower. Forecasters expect a brief but intense peak of 50+ meteors per hour over Earth's northern hemisphere sometime between 0200 UTC and 0700 UTC on Friday morning, Jan. 4th. (Subtract 5 hours to convert UTC to EST.) The timing favors observers in the eastern USA, Europe and western parts of Asia. Winter storms frequently hide this shower from observers on the ground. To avoid such problems, a team of astronomers led by Peter Jenniskens of the SETI Institute plan to fly a plane above the clouds where they can train their cameras on the Quadrantids. Their data may reveal whether asteroid 2003 EH1 is the fragment of a broken-apart comet. Visit http://spaceweather.com for sky maps and more information.

JUST FOR FUN: This is a good time of year to see Orion the Hunter: the constellation rises in the east at sunset. Watching Orion ascend, you may experience the little-known "constellation illusion." The idea is the same as the Moon illusion; constellations viewed near the horizon look abnormally large. Go outside tonight and look. Can you believe your eyes?

Again I say, Your opinion counts for nothing...if LE contacts me I will cooperate,
I just won't cooperate with you, you are not LE. They have access to email, the same as you. Why do you think LE does not have the resources it takes to contact me? I believe that LE is much better equipped than you.

Why avoid the question, Why do you think LE does not have the resources it takes to contact me?

Amazing how Mark claims that he is better equiped than LE to investigate. I think Mark has seen too many episodes of Law and Order. Face it Mark, you are not a big city lawer or cop. You are just some blathering idiot hiding out in the UP.

"such as when RH asked me to speak to todd a couple fo years ago"

Riley don't need Mark. The man is an attorney with the FCC, he does not need Mark to act for him, plus it would be a violation of the FCC's own rules, regualations, and the civil service act. Damn Mark is stupid. I wonder if Riley knows of the claims KB9RQZ is making in regard to his professionalism.

Why would I need a court order to perform a Google search on March 24, 2007, do you need one to do a Google search today?

The information in question was on the net on that day. To access that same information today, you now would need a court order because it is now in storage.

Don't be so stupid silly wabbit.

No, that would be insulting, I respect Federal and Gov employees.
They have to deal with numb nuts like you who waste a lot of their time on frivilous claims and bullshit.

Where did I say you in particular made a claim? However, you did say that you discussed W4NTI and K3VR with Riley and you said he agreed with you so you obviously made some kind of claim.

no I made no claim I discussed them with RH after someone made the false chrage that I attacked them without cuase

I did not make a calaim and then talk rh someone (you perhaps) made a a claim I responded

why dont ou stop you lying

No, the issue is that you accused me of illegally accessing Google's back up files without a court order, which IMO such files contain proof that your wedding registry was on a Google cache. Which goes to the original question by you to provide proof that it was on a google cache of a web page.

I base this on,

1. On a Google search performed March 24, 2007, Google found a web page that contained a wedding registry for you and Google had already cached a copy of such web page. I accessed a cache copy of the web page which contained the registry to refute your claims of many friends.

2. I have a friend who works for Google's IT department and advised that every single transaction (search) records and the results are stored for a number of years as required by law, but the information is only available by court order. Which lead me to believe that if I had a court order and accessed the records for March 24, 2007, I could prove, as requested by you, that the wedding registry was cached by Google search. I never said that anyone accessed the records, I just said they were available under a court order.

If I had a court order to access Google's cached of March 24, 2007, I can prove it, exactly what I said here "the [data] can be released if ordered by a court during discovery.

Why don't you stop your lying...you said that "BTW the evdence conviced RH that I had reasonable suspision against and Crow and Dan and so he droped investagting the complaint aginst me" so obviously you discussed some type of claim against Dan and Brian to RH.

Even if you could serve me, you won't get anything, I don't live in MI and don't own anything in MI. Most attorneys will tell you 97% of civil claims go uncollected..save your money and buy a new radio...you will enjoy it more and will be happier in the long run.

Nevertheless, you say you are so close in knowing who I am, then serve everyone on your list, maybe you will get lucky.

Then sue in Florida or Washington D.C. or Alaska, or New York, you still won't get anything...remember that talk we had a while back about protecting ourselves...I am well protected...you wouldn't get a dime...

Don't act stupid, just because you are stupid, I have a record of your intrustion into my blog. Just give me another path to write code for, keeps me in practice. Such fun having my own personal code tester.

No, you are just whining because your little bantering here hasn't helped you. But since you are still pointing the finger at other innocent hams, it is time to make another statement of who I am not...

I am not Brian Crow K3VR

I am not Steve K4YZ

I am not Dan W4NTI

or anyone else Mark has mentioned, and the false claims lauded by Mark
C. Morgan KB9RQZ against these individuals is the sole responsibility of Mark C. Morgan.

Why does LE ignore Mark. Because they are smarter than him and don't have time for his childish school yard antics and fabricated evidence. "Teacher, dloyd is picking on me...whaaaaaaaaaa.

Greetings:

Just saw the latest Nokia ad for the N95 ("The next act is about to begin") playingin the Asian market. As with their previous ad ("There's a thing in my pocket") this one is marvelously inventive and creative!

In the last scene, as the ad is closing, in the midst of the background noise, I can just barely make out morse code. By the time my brain kicked in and I realized its was Morse, I only caught the last two characters.....sounded like "S" and zero.

Has anyone else seen that ad, noticed the code and been able to copy it?

Thanx!

Yes! I like it.

But if you were hoping that Woger would see it, you should know that he's not around the net on weekends. Some say that Woger is institutionalized on weekends, others say that he has a <gasp> girl friend that he visits. I think he's attending Voodoo rituals on weekends and cursing people's chickens.

I did almost the same thing at Milwaukee. I got inside a pickle barrel that had holes all around it. Hams would walk up, toss a quarter into

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

Enforcement Bureau

VIA CERTIFIED MAIL - RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED

June 1, 2007

William E. Westley, Jr.

10451 Maverick Street

New Port Richey, FL 34654

RE: Warning Notice: Amateur Radio License AF4GC; Case #EB-2007-3050

Dear Mr. Westley:

The licensee of the W4FLG repeater system has requested in writing
that you refrain from use of the repeater. The letter was issued as a result of your failure to follow operational rules set forth by the licensee/control operators of the repeater system for their users. You were previously requested verbally to refrain from using the system, but have apparently ignored both verbal and written requests.

The Commission requires that repeaters be under the supervision of a control operator and not only expects, but requires, such control operators and licensees to be responsible for the proper operation

repeater system. Control operators may take whatever steps are appropriate to ensure compliance with the repeater rules, including limiting the repeater use to certain users, converting the repeater to a closed repeater or taking it off the air entirely.

Please be advised that we expect you to abide by the request to stay off the W4FLG repeater and any other such request by a repeater licensee, control operator or trustee. If you use the repeater again after receipt of this letter, we will initiate enforcement action against your license, which may include revocation, monetary forfeiture (fine) or a modification proceeding to restrict the frequencies on which you may operate AF4GC.
Also please be advised that use of the output frequency of the repeaters
to interfere with their operation would be considered deliberate interference. There are numerous frequencies available to you for simplex
operation.

We note that your license expires October 21, 2007. You are advised
that renewal will not be routinely granted unless this matter is resolved.

Please call me at 717-338-2502 if you have any questions about this matter.

Sincerely,

W. Riley Hollingsworth

In the future, a rabbi makes a car. This car doesn't run on fuel, it runs on Judaic belief. And to start this car you must say "Baruch Hashem" (Praise G~d), the faster you say it the faster the car goes. Of course, the word to stop the car is "Amen".

So one day, a very spacey college student MARKY gets into his car and starts chanting, "Baruch Hashem, Baruch Hashem, Baruch Hashem..." The car speeds up and gets faster and faster.

Soon MARKY realizes that he is heading towards a cliff, he desperately struggles to remember the word and finally remembers.

The second before he goes off the cliff, he says "Amen!" and the car stops.

MARKY sighs in relief, and says, "Baruch Hashem"...

usurper, there is the report of the coming of Jesus Christ.

So I hold out my arms to my Redeemer, who, having been foretold for four thousand years, has come to suffer and to die for me on earth, at the time and under all the circumstances foretold. By His grace, I await death in peace, in the hope of being eternally united to Him. Yet I live with joy, whether in the prosperity which it pleases Him to bestow upon me, or in the adversity which He sends for my good, and which He has taught me to bear by His example.

738. The prophecies having given different signs which should all happen at the advent of the Messiah, it was necessary that all these signs should occur at the same time. So it was necessary that the fourth monarchy should have come, when the seventy weeks of Daniel were ended; and that the sceptre should have then departed from Judah. And all this happened without any difficulty. Then it was necessary that the Messiah should come; and Jesus Christ then came, who was called the Messiah. And all this again was without difficulty. This indeed shows the truth of the prophecies.

739. The prophets foretold, and were not foretold. The saints again were foretold, but did not foretell. Jesus Christ both foretold and was foretold.

740. Jesus Christ, whom the two Testaments regard, the Old as its hope, the New as its model, and both as their centre.

741. The two oldest books in the world are those of Moses and Job, the one a Jew and the other a Gentile. Both of them look upon Jesus Christ as their common centre and object: Moses in relating the promises of God to Abraham, Jacob, etc., and his prophecies; and Job, Quis mihi det ut, etc. Scio enim quod redemptor meus vivit, etc.146

742. The Gospel only speaks of the virginity of the Virgin up to the time of the birth of Jesus Christ. All with reference to Jesus Christ.

743. Proofs Of Jesus Christ.

Why was the book of Ruth preserved?

Why the story of Tamar?

And though there still remains an habitual strong persuasion;
yet not so as to exclude temptations to unbelief, and all possibility of doubting. But then, at particular times, by God's help, the same sense of things revives again, like fire that lay hid in ashes. I suppose the grounds of such a conviction of the truth of divine things to be just and rational; but yet, in some, God makes use of their own reason much more sensibly than in others. Oftentimes persons have (so far as could be judged) received the first saving conviction from reasoning which they have heard from the pulpit; and often in the course of reasoning they are led into in their own meditations.

The arguments are the same that they have heard hundreds of times; but the force of the arguments, and their conviction by them, is altogether new; they come with a new and before unexperienced power. Before, they heard it was so, and they allowed it to be so; but now they see it to be so indeed. Things now look exceeding plain to them, and they wonder they did not see them before.

They are so greatly taken with their new discovery,

When force attacks humbug, when a private soldier takes the square cap off a first president, and throws it out of the window.

311. The government founded on opinion and imagination reigns for some time, and this government is pleasant and voluntary; that founded on might lasts for ever. Thus opinion is the queen of the world, but might is its tyrant.

312. Justice is what is established; and thus all our established laws will necessarily be regarded as just without examination, since they are established.

313. Sound opinions of the people.--Civil wars are the greatest of evils. They are inevitable, if we wish to reward desert; for all will say they are deserving. The evil we have to fear from a fool who succeeds by right of birth, is neither so great nor so sure.

314. God has created all for Himself. He has bestowed upon Himself the power of pain and pleasure.

You can apply it to God, or to yourself. If to God, the Gospel is the rule. If to yourself, you will take the place of God. As God is surrounded by persons full of charity, who ask of Him the blessings of charity that are in His power, so... recognise, then, and learn that you are only a king of lust, and take the ways of lust.

315. The reason of effects.--It is wonderful that men would not have me honour a man clothed in brocade and followed by seven or eight lackeys! Why! He will have me thrashed, if I do not salute him. This custom is a farce. It is the same with a horse in fine trappings in comparison with another! Montaigne is a fool not to see what difference there is, to wonder at our finding any, and to ask the reason. "Indeed," says he, "how comes it," etc....

of such envious thoughts; which if allowed tend exceedingly to quench the Spirit of God, if not to provoke Him finally to forsake them. And when such a spirit has much prevailed, and persons have not so earnestly strove against it as they ought to have done, it has seemed to be exceedingly to the hindrance of the good of their souls. But in some other instances, where persons have been much terrified at the sight of such wickedness in their hearts, God has brought good to them out of evil; and made it a means of convincing them of their own desperate sinfulness, and bringing them off from all self-confidence.

The drift of the Spirit of God in His legal strivings with persons, has seemed most evidently to be, to bring to a conviction of their absolute dependence on His sovereign power and grace, and an universal necessity of a mediator. This has been effected by leading them more and more to a sense of their exceeding wickedness and guiltiness in His sight; their pollution, and the insufficiency of their own righteousness; that they can in no wise help themselves, and that God would be wholly just and righteous in rejecting them and all that they do, and in casting them off for ever. There is however a vast variety as to the manner and distinctness of such convictions.

As they are gradually more and more convinced of the corruption and wickedness of their hearts, they seem to themselves to grow worse and worse, harder and blinder, and more desperately wicked, instead of growing better. They are ready to be discouraged by it, and oftentimes never think themselves so far off from good as when they are nearest.
Under the sense which the Spirit of God gives them of their sinfulness, they often think that they differ from all others; their hearts are ready to sink with the thought that they are the worst of all, and that none ever obtained mercy who were so wicked as they.

When awakenings first begin, their consciences are commonly most exercised about

Those photos are excellent! Thanks for the link. I saved a few of them to be used as desktop photos.
Now, what I would like to know is what kind of camera and lens the photographer was using. It would seem that he was using the burst mode to get the action shots he did in such a rapid succession.
I especially liked the "rooster tail" that the low flying fighter caused as it flew low over the water.

I also noted that the photog said that the jet did NOT fly under the bridge, but hopped up and over it at the last minute. Those Blue Angel pilots are true Jet Jockeys.

Mark is worried that the letters of complaint to Hughes may result in his account being lost, or at least throttled down.
In fact, there are those who are already saying that Hughes has contacted Mark and warned him to cease and desist his floods.
This would explain why Mark has had to resort to Google for his occasional post.

At any rate it is a welcome respite to see Mark absent from this group save for an occasional comment or two. This is NOT his group as he feels it to be. He has lost his squatters rights to this and other groups. Good riddance.

Now, maybe, just maybe, we can get back to posting comments about Amateur Radio without Mark hijacking everybody's threads.

And in that vein, maybe I can work some of this group's posters on 17M. I have a 205 foot wire fed with 90 feet of ladder line that works quite well on 17. I also enjoy working 12M on weekends with the same wire. For closer work I also use a home brew version of the G5RV antenna which is only 105 feet in length. My 205 footer is oriented for east/west work while the G5RV is oriented for north/south work.
I use an MFJ 986 tuner to tweak my antennas and rarely run over 100 to 200 watts. I use two Yaesu rigs for my HF work. I have an MFJ keyer for CW work and while it is not the best, it does the job.
I am fortunate in that I have enough property to hang these antennas without having to fold them in upon themselves. My neighbors are unconcerned with the wires and ignore them. We have no neighborhood restrictions on antennas...at least not yet and the only TVI the neighbors have ever experienced came from a local CBer who ran an overpowered and "dirty" station. That CBer has since moved away and the neighbors now realize that it was he who was causing the problems, not me.
I also augment my station with a pair of Marine batteries for those rare occasions when the summer storms knock our power out.

Again, I am not giving my name or call sign for obvious reasons. I see no need to invite anonymous emails or spam from the one or two mentally challenged posters who frequent this news group.

The idiot from Chassell calls my choice cowardice, but I and many others realize that I am simply being intelligent enough to not fall victim to flamers and spammers.

73. Maybe we can hook up on 17M soon...

wel;l I have not seen any one accualy saying that but as a point of fact Hughes has not even bothered to contact me about the current round of complaints

I wonder if they even exist BTW but that is another matter

Sure it was...And bigoted hate at that...You basically told the Brits (capitalized, Markie...It's a formal reference...) to get lost just because they were not discussing United States policy matters.

You manifested the very example of the "Ugly American". (and having seen your morbidly obese, unwashed mug on the net before, I can attest to it in more ways than one...)

which was the type of it.

Among the Jews the truth was only typified; in heaven it is revealed.

In the Church it is hidden and recognised by its resemblance to the type.

The type has been made according to the truth, and the truth has been recognised according to the type.

Saint Paul says himself that people will forbid to marry, and he himself speaks of it to the Corinthians in a way which is a snare. For if a prophet had said the one, and Saint Paul had then said the other, he would have been accused.

674. Typical.--"Do all things according to the pattern which has been shown thee on the mount." On which Saint Paul says that the Jews have shadowed forth heavenly things.

675.... And yet this Covenant, made to blind some and enlighten others, indicated in those very persons, whom it blinded, the truth which should be recognised by others. For the visible blessings which they received from God were so great and so divine that He indeed appeared able to give them those that are invisible and a Messiah.

For nature is an image of Grace, and visible miracles are images of the invisible. Ut sciatis... tibi dico: Surge.127

Isaiah says that Redemption will be as the passage of the Red Sea.

God has, then, shown by the deliverance from Egypt, and from the sea, by the defeat of kings, by the manna, by the whole genealogy of Abraham, that He was able to save, to send down bread from heaven, etc.; so that the people hostile to Him are the type and the representation of the very Messiah whom they know not, etc.

He has, then, taught us at last that all these things were only types and what is "true freedom," a "true Israelite," "true circumcision," "true bread from heaven," etc.

In these promises each one finds what he has most at heart, temporal benefits or spiritual, God or the creatures; but with this difference, that those who therein seek the creatures find them, but with many contradictions, with a prohibition of this subject without being horrified at conduct so extravagant?

This resting in ignorance is a monstrous thing, and they who pass their life in it must be made to feel its extravagance and stupidity, by having it shown to them, so that they may be confounded by the sight of their folly. For this is how men reason, when they choose to live in such ignorance of what they are and without seeking enlightenment. "I know not," they say...

196. Men lack heart; they would not make a friend of it.

197. To be insensible to the extent of despising interesting things, and to become insensible to the point which interests us most.

198. The sensibility of man to trifles, and his insensibility to great things, indicates a strange inversion.

199. Let us imagine a number of men in chains and all condemned to death, where some are killed each day in the sight of the others, and those who remain see their own fate in that of their fellows and wait their turn, looking at each other sorrowfully and without hope. It is an image of the condition of men.

200. A man in a dungeon, ignorant whether his sentence be pronounced and having only one hour to learn it, but this hour enough, if he knew that it is pronounced, to obtain its repeal, would act unnaturally in spending that hour, not in ascertaining his sentence, but in playing piquet. So it is against nature that man, etc. It is making heavy the hand of God.

Thus not only the zeal of those who seek Him proves God, but also the blindness of those who seek Him not.

201. All the objections of this one and that one only go against themselves, and not against religion. All that infidels say ...

202. From those who are in despair at being without faith, we see that God does not enlighten them; but as to the rest, we see there is a God who makes them blind.

203. Fascinatio nugacitatis.[2

do not know ourselves to be full of pride, ambition, lust, weakness, misery, and injustice, we are indeed blind. And if, knowing this, we do not desire deliverance, what can we say of a man...?

What then, can we have but esteem for a religion which knows so well the defects of man, and desire for the truth of a religion which promises remedies so desirable?

451. All men naturally hate one another. They employ lust as far as possible in the service of the public weal. But this is only a pretnece and a false image of love; for at bottom it is only hate.

452. To pity the unfortunate is not contrary to lust. On the contrary, we can quite well give such evidence of friendship, and acquire the reputation of kindly feeling, without giving anything.

453. From lust men have found and extracted excellent rules of policy, morality, and justice; but in reality this vile root of man, this figmentum malum, is only covered, it is not taken away.

454. Injustice.--They have not found any other means of satisfying lust without doing injury to others.

455. Self is hateful. You, Milton, conceal it; you do not for that reason destroy it; you are, then, always hateful.

No; for in acting as we do to oblige everybody, we give no more occasion for hatred of us. That is true, if we only hated in Self the vexation which comes to us from it. But if I hate it because it is unjust and because it makes itself the centre of everything, I shall always hate it.

In a word, the Self has two qualities: it is unjust in itself since it makes itself the centre of everything; it is inconvenient to others since it would enslave them; for each Self is the enemy, and would like to be the tyrant of all others. You take away its inconvenience, but not its injustice, and so you do not render it lovable to those who hate injustice; you render it lovable only to the u

821. Why the US airwaves are not free

The ruling democrat and republican parties proclaim that the airwaves "belong to the people." But if the people ever try to get access to any mass media that uses the airwaves, they would find these same parties tightly control them. The statement that the airwaves belong to the people is a hollow phrase that makes people feel good, as long as they never test it.

The American airwaves are almost completely dominated by large and wealthy private groups that broadcast their own opinions, not necessarily those of the people.

The democrat and republican parties want to control the airwaves for the same reason that totalitarian governments shut down any opposition media organizations. They want to censor the information that the mass of the people are allowed to know, in case the population gets too much negative information and wishes to throw the ruling parties out.

Secondly, when a political party is in power, it gets to dole out government contracts and licenses to private groups that petition it. What you don't see is that the halls of Congress and the regulatory agencies and the White House are crowded with lobbyists whose job is to distribute bribes to government officials for these privileges. In America, these bribes are promises of high-paying, do-nothing jobs like seats on Boards of Directors of corporations, and other nice jobs. Former senator Bill Bradley now sits on the board of Starbucks. These bribes are also called campaign contributions.

Now you know why the ruling parties, the democrat and republican, fought so hard to end freedom on the internet. Freedom of speech requires privacy and privacy requires anonymity. So to end freedom on the internet, these parties had to destroy any anonymity of speech you have on the internet.

Tyrannical parties, the Chinese communists and the American democrats and republicans, must be able to know who is spreading threatening political speech in any form of mass media because this threatens their control over the gravy train of government taxes and contract awards.

Since only 39% of the electorate vote in an American election, and the two parties are roughly even, this means that either party represents less than 20% of the eligible voters. But it costs nothing, only a signature to say you belong to one party or another, so the real percentage that either ruling political party in America represents is much smaller than 20%. So neither the democrats nor republicans, even combined, represent a majority of even the electorate which is not even the the population itself.

The American ruling parties had a special problem. They had to shut down freedom of internet speech without appearing to be against free speech. They needed an excuse. They found the excuse in two ways. Terrorism and Pedophilia.

In order to take freedom and rights away from the people, a political party in power must first convince the people to give up their freedoms willingly. The democrate and republican parties used an old political trick. They had to convince the people there was a monster among them, and that they had to give up their privacy to the the ruling parties so the parties could protect them. What was this monster?

It was pedophilia. They could not do through the terrorism argument because the terrorist are really just a foreign group. The ruling parties chose pedophilia as an excuse to control the internet because pedophiles are normal people from the general population. They cannot be differentiated from the population, so they are invisible. An invisible is so much more frightening. The ruling parties made sure that their friends in the mass media like yahoo and the news agencies only broadcast stories depicting pedophiles as evil, and never allowing news stories in which pedophilia is depicted as good or neutral.

The ruling parties and other ambitious political groups, like lesbian-feminists and the christian right, were also competing with each other. Any group that could say that the invisible army of drooling pedophiles was more dangerous, and that it could protect the people even better, would gain political advantage.

Now you know how the ruling parties in the US took away the latest form of mass media that gave you freedom of speech. You also know why they did it.

If you ever make political speech that might be a threat to the ruling parties, these parties will know right where to find you and they will pick you off one by one. No will know that you are being picked off because they ruling parties will neve admit that that their reason was political speech.

Instead they will send a low-level agent around to your house when you are asleep or not at home. She will pick through your garbage and peek in your window. They will keep looking for some slight infraction or law they can charge you with. Even if the charge is thrown out of court, just fighting the case will bankrupt you and waste months of your life.

It is said, "Believe in the Church"; but it is not said, "Believe in miracles"; because the last is natural, and not the first. The one had need of a precept, not the other. Hezekiah.

The synagogue was only a type, and thus it did not perish; and it was only a type, and so it is decayed. It was a type which contained the truth, and thus it has lasted until it no longer contained the truth.

My reverend father, all this happened in types. Other religions perish; this one perishes not.

Miracles are more important than you think. They have served for the foundation, and will serve for the continuation of the Church till Antichrist, till the end.

571. The reason why. Types.--They had to deal with a carnal people and to render them the depositary of the spiritual covenant. To give faith to the Messiah, it was necessary there should have been precedent prophesies, and that these should be conveyed by persons above suspicion, diligent, faithful, unusually zealous, and known to all the world.

To accomplish all this, God chose this carnal people, to whom He entrusted the prophecies which foretell the Messiah as a deliverer and as a dispenser of those carnal goods which this people loved. And thus they have had an extraordinary passion for their prophets and, in sight of the whole world, have had charge of these books which foretell their Messiah, assuring all nations that He should come and in the way foretold in the books, which they held open to the whole world. Yet this people, deceived by the poor and ignominious advent of the Messiah, have been His most cruel enemies. So that they, the people least open to suspicion in the world of favouring us, the most strict and most zealous that can be named for their law and their prophets, have kept the books incorrupt. Hence those who have rejected and crucified Jesus Christ, who has been to them an offence, are those who have charge of the books which testify of Him, and state that He will be an offence and rejected. Therefore they have shown it was He by rejecting Him, and He has been alike proved both by the righteous Jews who received Him and by the unrighteous who rejected Him, both facts having been foretold.

Epictetus concludes that, since there are consistent Christians, every man can easily be so.

351. Those great spiritual efforts, which the soul sometimes assays, are things on which it does not lay hold. It only leaps to them, not as upon a throne, for ever, but merely for an instant.

352. The strength of a man's virtue must not be measured by his efforts, but by his ordinary life.

353. I do not admire the excess of a virtue as of valour, except I see at the same time the excess of the opposite virtue, as in Epaminondas, who had the greatest valour and the greatest kindness. For otherwise it is not to rise, it is to fall. We do not display greatness by going to one extreme, but in touching both at once, and filling all the intervening space. But perhaps this is only a sudden movement of the soul from one to the other extreme, and in fact it is ever at one point only, as in the case of a firebrand. Be it so, but at least this indicates agility if not expanse of soul.

The discoveries of men from age to age turn out the same. The kindness and the malice of the world in general are the same. Plerumque gratae principibus vices.[47]

355. Continuous eloquence wearies.

Princes and kings sometimes play. They are not always on their thrones. They weary there. Grandeur must be abandoned to be appreciated. Continuity in everything is unpleasant. Cold is agreeable, that we may get warm.

"Hearken unto me, my people, and give ear unto me; for a law shall proceed from me, and I will make my judgment to rest for a light of the Gentiles."

Amos viii. The prophet, having enumerated the sins of Israel, said that God had sworn to take vengeance on them.

He says this: "And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord, that I will cause the sun to go down at noon, and I will darken the earth in the clear day; and I will turn your feasts into mourning, and all your songs into lamentation.

"You all shall have sorrow and suffering, and I will make this nation mourn as for an only son, and the end therefore as a bitter day. Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord. And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east; they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it.

"In that day shall the fair virgins and young men faint for thirst. They that have followed the idols of Samaria, and sworn by the god of Dan, and followed the manner of Beersheba, shall fall, and never rise up again."

Amos 3:2: "Ye only have I known of all the families of the earth for my people."

Daniel 12:7. Having described all the extent of the reign of the Messiah, he says: "All these things shall be finished, when the scattering of the people of Israel shall be accomplished."

Haggai 2:4: "Ye who, comparing this second house with the glory of the first, despise it, be strong, saith the Lord, be strong, O Zerubbabel, and O Jesus, the high priest, be strong, all ye people of the land, and work. We must see if this fine philosophy has gained nothing certain from so long and so intent study; perhaps at least the soul will know itself. Let us hear the rulers of the world on this subject. What have they thought of her substance? 394.[10] Have they been more fortunate in locating her? 395. What have they found out about her origin, duration, and departure? Harum sententiarum, 399.[11]

Is, then, the soul too noble a subject for their feeble lights? What have those great dogmatists, who are ignorant of nothing, known of this matter? 393.[12]

This would doubtless suffice, if Reason were reasonable. She is reasonable enough to admit that she has been unable to find anything durable, but she does not yet despair of reaching it; she is as ardent as ever in this search, and is confident she has within her the necessary powers for this conquest. Sincerity of the Jews.--They preserve lovingly and carefully the book in which Moses declares that they have been all their life ungrateful to God, and that he knows they will be still more so after his death; but that he calls heaven and earth to witness against them and that he has taught them enough.

He declares that God, being angry with them, shall at last scatter them among all the nations of the earth; that as they have offended Him by worshipping gods who were not their God, so He will provoke them by calling a people who are not His people; that He desires that all His words be preserved for ever, and that His book be placed in the Ark of the Covenant to serve for ever as a witness against them.

Isaiah says the same thing, 30.

632. On Esdras.--The story that the books were burnt with the temple proved false by Maccabees: "Jeremiah gave them the law."

The story that he recited the whole by heart. Josephus and Esdras point out that he read the book. Baronius, Annales Ecclesiastici a Christo Nato ad Annum 1198, 180: Nullus penitus Hebraeorum antiquorum reperitur qui tradiderit libros periisse et per Esdram esse restitutos, nisi in IV Esdrae.

Philo, in Vita Mosis: Illa lingua ac character quo antiquitus scripta est lex sic permansit usque ad LXX.

Josephus says that the Law was in Hebrew when it was translated by the Seventy.

Under Antiochus and Vespasian, when they wanted to abolish the books, and when there was no prophet, they could not do so. And under the Babylonians, when no persecution had been made, and when there were so many prophets, would they have let them be burnt?

And those who must despise men, and put them on a level with the brutes, yet wish to be admired and believed by men, and contradict themselves by their own feelings; their nature, which is stronger than all, convincing them of the greatness of man more forcibly than reason convinces them of their baseness.

405. Contradiction.--Pride counterbalancing all miseries. Man either hides his miseries, or, if he disclose them, glories in knowing them.

406. Pride counterbalances and takes away all miseries. Here is a strange monster and a very plain aberration. He is fallen from his place and is anxiously seeking it. This is what all men do. Let us see who will have found it.

407. When malice has reason on its side, it becomes proud and parades reason in all its splendour. When austerity or stern choice has not arrived at the true good and must needs return to follow nature, it becomes proud by reason of this return.

408. Evil is easy, and has infinite forms; good is almost unique. But a certain kind of evil is as difficult to find as what we call good; and often on this account such particular evil gets passed off as good. An extraordinary greatness of soul is needed in order to attain to it as well as to good.

unworthy of God to unite Himself to wretched man; but it is not unworthy of God to pull him out of his misery.

511. If we would say that man is too insignificant to deserve communion with God, we must indeed be very great to judge of it.

512. It is, in peculiar phraseology, wholly the body of Jesus Christ, but it cannot be said to be the whole body of Jesus Christ. The union of two things without change does not enable us to say that one becomes the other; the soul thus being united to the body, the fire to the timber, without change. But change is necessary to make the form of the one become the form of the other; thus the union of the Word to man. Because my body without my soul would not make the body of a man; therefore my soul united to any matter whatsoever will make my body. It does not distinguish the necessary condition from the sufficient condition; the union is necessary, but not sufficient. The left arm is not the right.

Impenetrability is a property of matter.

Identity de numero in regard to the same time requires the identity of matter.

Thus if God united my soul to a body in China, the same body, idem numero would be in China.

The same river which runs there is idem numero as that which runs at the same time in China.

513. Why God has established prayer.

1. To communicate to His creatures the dignity of causality.

2. To teach us from whom our virtue comes.

3. To make us deserve other virtues by work.

(But to keep His own pre-eminence, He grants prayer to whom He pleases.)

Objection: But we believe that we hold prayer of ourselves.

This is absurd; for since, though having faith, we cannot have virtues, how should we have faith? Is there a greater distance between infidelity and faith than between faith and virtue?

Merit. This word is ambiguous.

are as well founded as some of ours; for they have none so demonstrative as some of ours. The comparison is unfair. We must not put on the same level and confound things, because they seem to agree in one point, while they are so different in another. The clearness in divine things requires us to revere the obscurities in them.

It is like men, who employ a certain obscure language among themselves. Those who should not understand it would understand only a foolish meaning.

651. Extravagances of the Apocalyptics, Preadamites, who would base extravagant opinions on Scripture will, for example, base them on this. It is said that "this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled." Upon that I will say that after that generation will come another generation, and so on ever in succession.

Solomon and the King are spoken of in the second book of Chronicles as if they were two different persons. I will say that they were two.

652. Particular Types.--A double law, double tables of the law, a double temple, a double captivity.

In God the word does not differ from the intention, for He is true; nor the word from the effect, for He is powerful; nor the means from the effect, for He is wise. St. Bernard, Ultimo Sermo in Missam.

St. Augustine, City of God, v. 10. This rule is general. God can do everything, except those things which, if He could do, He would not be almighty, as dying, being deceived, lying, etc.

A Faithful Narrative of the Surprising Work of God

by Jonathan Edwards

A Faithful Narrative of the Surprising Work of God is Jonathan Edwards' own account of the mighty way in which God moved among the people of Northampton, Massachusetts and other nearby communities in the early stages of what has become known as The Great Awakening. There is much to be learned from Edwards regarding the nature of true conversion and how God's Spirit works in awakening and converting sinners. A Faithful Narrative is reproduced

--The sceptre till the Messiah--without king or prince.

The eternal law--changed.

The eternal covenant--a new covenant.

Good laws--bad precepts. Ezekiel.

687. Types.--When the word of God, which is really true, is false literally, it is true spiritually. Sede a dextris meis:136 this is false literally, therefore it is true spiritually.

In these expressions, God is spoken of after the manner of men; and this means nothing else but that the intention which men have in giving a seat at their right hand, God will have also. It is then an indication of the intention of God, not of His manner of carrying it out.

Thus when it is said, "God has received the odour of your incense, and will in recompense give you a rich land," that is equivalent to saying that the same intention which a man would have, who, pleased with your perfumes, should in recompense give you a rich land, God will have towards you, because you have had the same intention as a man has towards him to whom he presents perfumes. So iratus est, a "jealous God," etc. For, the things of God being inexpressible, they cannot be spoken of otherwise, and the Church makes use of them even to-day: Quia confortavit seras,137 etc.

It is not allowable to attribute to Scripture the meaning which is not revealed to us that it has. Thus, to say that the closed mem of Isaiah signifies six hundred, has not been revealed. It might be said that the final tsade and he deficientes may signify mysteries. But it is not allowable to say so, and still less to say this is the way of the philosopher's stone. But we say that the literal meaning is not the true meaning, because the prophets have themselves said so.

But he was thinking of sins, and, to show this, he says that Gabriel came to tell him that his prayer was heard, and that there were only seventy weeks to wait, after which the people would be freed from iniquity, sin would have an end, and the Redeemer, the Holy of Holies, would bring eternal justice, not legal, but eternal.

SECTION XI: THE PROPHECIES

693. When I see the blindness and the wretchedness of man, when I regard the whole silent universe and man without light, left to himself and, as it were, lost in this corner of the universe, without knowing who has put him there, what he has come to do, what will become of him at death, and incapable of all knowledge, I become terrified, like a man who should be carried in his sleep to a dreadful desert island and should awake without knowing where he is and without means of escape. And thereupon I wonder how people in a condition so wretched do not fall into despair. I see other persons around me of a like nature. I ask them if they are better informed than I am. They tell me that they are not. And thereupon these wretched and lost beings, having looked around them and seen some pleasing objects, have given and attached themselves to them. For my own part, I have not been able to attach myself to them, and, considering how strongly it appears that there is something else than what I see, I have examined and since that darkness in which they are, and with which they upbraid the immediately go out of the world by any accident, and that there is no visible danger in any respect in his circumstances. The manifold and continual experience of the world in all ages, shows this is no evidence, that a man is not on the very brink of eternity, and that the next step will not be into another world. The unseen, unthought-of ways and means of persons going suddenly out of the world are innumerable and inconceivable. Unconverted men walk over the pit of hell on a rotten covering, and there are innumerable places in this covering so weak that they will not bear their weight, and these places are not seen. The arrows of death fly unseen at noon-day; the sharpest sight cannot discern them. God has so many different unsearchable ways of taking wicked men out of the world and sending them to hell, that there is nothing to make it appear, that God had need to be at the expense of a miracle, or go out of the ordinary course of his providence, to destroy any wicked man, at any moment. All the means that there are of sinners going out of the world, are so in God's hands, and so universally and absolutely sub Miracles endless, false.

In order to weaken your adversaries, you disarm the whole Church.

If they say that our salvation depends upon God, they are "heretics." If they say that they are obedient to the Pope, that is "hypocrisy." If they are ready to subscribe to all the articles, that is not enough. If they say that a man must not be killed for an apple, "they attack the morality of Catholics." If miracles are done among them, it is not a sign of holiness, and is, on the contrary a symptom of heresy.

This way in which the Church has existed is that truth has been without dispute, or, if it has been contested, there has been the Pope, or, failing him, there has been the Church.

Attention all Amateur Operators.

Please Read, and send your comments to the ARRL and Romney Website.

Wednesday 16 November 2005 @ 15:48:10 | Eastern Massachusetts ARRL Romney 'Disses' Amateur Radio In Televised Town Meeting Posted on Wednesday 16 November 2005 @ 15:48:10

Governor Mitt Romney dismissed the role of Amateur Radio operators in emergency communications during a televised 'town meeting' program last night on WCVB's 'When Disaster Strikes: Segment Two.'
The program featured public safety and volunteer organization officials from across Massachusetts among its audience.

Host and moderator Natalie Jacobson asked an increasingly-agitated Governor Romney questions about communications interoperability, and communication without commercial power.

Romney was next asked by Jacobson, '...so does it come down to ham radio?...'

The Governor replied in a disgusted tone, 'No, we don't need to deal with ham radio operators...'

Embarrassed public safety officials later tried to put in a good word for Amateur Radio.

National Weather Service Warning Coordination Meteorologist Glenn Field was prepared to state the importance of Amateur Radio, when Salvation Army Colonel Fred Van Brunt was called upon. Van Brunt remarked about his organization's quest to improve its communications capabilities and how Amateur Radio has aided his organization. 'The ham radio situation helps a great deal,' he stated.

'I have already written and submitted a letter to the Governor's Office,' wrote Eastern MA Section Emergency Coordinator Rob Macedo, KD1CY. 'I have also written an email to Natalie Jacobson.'

ARRL Section Manager Mike Neilsen, W1MPN sent a section-wide email today to all Eastern MA ARRL members describing the incident along with actions he and his staff were taking to mitigate the situation.

'[Romney's] attitude about us sets an unfortunate tone within the state's executive branch,' wrote Neilsen. 'As a former military officer, I see this as a failure in leadership. My immediate concern is our working relationship within the [Massachusetts Emergency Management Team] environment.'

Neilsen intends to address the Governor's comments as 'an urgent matter' at a meeting on November 17 with Don Carlton from the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency.

'I was very disturbed about what the Governor stated on the program,' wrote Ron Wood, W1PLW, the section's Public Information Coordinator. 'It does show that more work is needed by all hams in the section. It's a great idea to write letters explaining the good we do.'

Wood is attempting to schedule a meeting with the Governor's office tomorrow so that EMA ARRL staffers might discuss the matter further.

Tom Kinahan, N1CPE wrote that Governor Romney's comment has made 'a PR problem' for Kinahan in his role as MA State RACES Officer.

'I've got a roster of over 150 Amateur Radio operators that support local communities, and those of us that directly support the state government. There are at least double that in terms of people that are actually out there that I don't have formal paperwork on that support Amateur Radio emergency communications in some organized manner... The Governor has said that he 'certainly doesn't need to rely on ham radio' -- where does that leave the RACES program now?'

'I am ashamed tonight that I am a Republican!' remarked one ham radio viewer. '[Romney] speaks in derogatory tones about hams. He certainly shows an ignorance as to what we do and are capable of. I suggest a grass roots campaign of local hams calling the State House and The Governor's Office to protest.'

ANd as pointed out in that "other newsgroup", the message is now over two years old.

Unless someone actually researches what happened afterwards, anyone who "sends their comments" is likely to come across as clueless, and may even be dismissed as a crockpot since they may not even know what the email is about, enough time having passed and enough staff turnover having occurred.

That seems to not be an issue with hams.
Being several days late and $25 short is standard operating procedure.
Heck most of the hams I hear on 75 Meters at night in 4 and 5 land still sound like their stuck in the 1940's and 50's with all their use of the N-word and racial tirades against Obama and Hillary and all the other assorted obsolete BS spewed out on a nightly basis.
What else is new?

The flooder kb9rqz has been silenced ever since Jan 4, 2008. That has led to the outcome you've noticed. If kb9rqz remains muted, then the news group will probably start to return to its old behavior, but it's going to take time.

There are two factors contributing to the absence of flooding (Hipcrime notwithstanding): (1) Teranews - kb9rqz's primary NSP - has been down since Jan 4th, and (2) the web site at http://stopkb9rqz.blogspot.com has caused kb9rqz to pull back his horns and lie low until he is assured that Hughesnet is going to do nothing in response to all of the complaints which have been sent. At the moment, surface mails have either just arrived at Hughes or are about to arrive shortly. We'll soon know if Hughes is going to respond to those letters. If they don't, I'm sure that Mr. Morgan will happily return to flooding this group just as soon as Teranews is again operational.

What an f'ing hoot. The whole group was yanked because both you and some other fool were flooding the group, it had nothing to do with attacks on you!!! You are the main reason it got yanked, same thing that Doug Adair did on a couple of website. They got so many complaints, they just yanked the group instead of dealing with the moron.
Now that being said, if one wants to see if Mark lost his account, all they have to do is check his posts via Google. If none are through Tera news, then it got yanked. I'll bet if you check posts made on some of the other ham groups
you'll find post done through Tera news, that will show everyone that Mark's a liar!!!

residents holding slaves in their homes? But the Governor did not propose to be compromised. He wrote to the Secretary of State at London: "I believe I only anticipate your instructions, in giving orders that the law, whatever may be the consequences to the brothel system, should be strictly enforced so as to secure the freedom of the women." But he reckoned without his host. The Secretary of State did not stand by the Governor. So far as the records show, the Governor and Chief Justice stood alone, his entire Executive Council taking the opposing side. What was to be done?

CHAPTER 11.

THE MAN FOR THE OCCASION.

Consistency demanded that either the brothel system at Hong Kong should be abolished, or domestic slavery and so-called "adoption" should be tolerated. No other courses were open. In his perplexity, the Governor asked his learned Chinese interpreter, Dr. Eitel, to give him further light as to this domestic slavery and "adoption" prevalent among the Chinese. This request was granted in a document entitled "Domestic servitude in relation to slavery." Dr. Eitel's main points were:

Slavery as known to the Westerner "has always been an incident of race." "Slavery, therefore, has such a peculiar meaning ... that one ought to hesitate before applying the term rashly" to Chinese domestic slavery. Slavery in China grows out of the fact that the father has all power, even to death, over his family. The father, on the other hand, "has many duties as well as rights." Therefore his power over his family "is not a mark of tyranny, but of religious unity." "Few foreigners have comprehended the extent of social equality, ... the amount of influence which woman, bought and sold as she is, really has in China,... the depth of domestic affection, of filial piety, of paternal care." "To deal justly with the slavery of China,

On September 29th, 1879, the Chief Justice sentenced more criminals for trafficking in children. A Japanese girl, Sui Ahing, eleven years old, was brought to the Colony by a Chinaman who had bought the child in Japan of its parents. Needing money to go on to his native place, this Chinaman borrowed $50 of a native resident at Hong Kong, and left the child as security for the debt. The wife of the man in whose custody the child was left beat the child severely and she ran out of the house. She was found wandering on the street late at night, and the finder took her and sold her to another Chinese party, who threatened to send her to Singapore as a prostitute. It was plain the last purchaser intended either to send her to Singapore or keep her at

During the year previous, 1876, Ordinance No. 2 had been passed, depriving the Registrar General of the much-abused judicial powers he had exercised since 1867, and transferring them to the police magistrates.

Speaking of the incident of Tai Yau having sold her boy to pay her fine, Governor Hennessy wrote the Colonial Office, under date of December 6th, 1877:

into the life of open prostitution, all the presumptive evidence should have turned such a case as this against the informer. Many similar cases of the conviction of women of being keepers and inmates of secret brothels, were secured on this sort of evidence. One young girl of 14 was entrapped by marked money being found in her toilet table. The court records showed that this was the second time she had been entrapped in this manner. This second time she was convicted and sent to the Lock Hospital where, upon examination, exceptional conditions demonstrated beyond doubt that she was still a virgin. But what of the many young girls with whom exceptional conditions did not exist, when _they_ were brought to the examination table?

During the year 1873, two women were severely injured by jumping out of their windows to escape the informers. One fractured her leg.

The cook of Inspector King testified in the Registrar General's court: "Yesterday I received orders of Mr. King to go to Wanchai, and see if I could catch some unlicensed prostitutes." This man was employed, and his employer orders him off to this wicked business, and he must either obey or take his discharge. A Chinese servant ordered to go commit adultery by the man who employed him as his cook. These things were constantly done by employers of Chinese men. Yet these native servants are all married men, for they marry so young in the Orient. And Government money was furnished them besides to pay for the debauchery, and if they brought in a good case for prosecution they got a reward in money besides. So this cook is ordered off by his master to "catch some unlicensed prostitutes," with the same _sang froid_ as though ordered to go catch some fish for dinner. The cook seemed to know where to get the most ardent assistance for the task his employer had set him, for he

Such testimony is valuable from papers which have consistently supported the Contagious Diseases Ordinances and vilified the opponents of the State regulation of vice. There can be little doubt that a large proportion of the girls and young women who are brought to the Straits Settlements for immoral purposes have been sold in China to the brothel-keepers' confederates. In many cases girls are thus sold by their parents for the payment of gambling and other debts, and sometimes, alas, to provide money for the purchase of opium. Surely it is a burning shame that British Colonies should have become the market for the sale of Chinese women into this diabolical form of slavery.

This article cannot be closed without a brief reference to another and more subtle form of slavery which is well known to exist in the Straits. The last Report of the Chinese Protectorate reveals the fact that during last year (1892) in Singapore alone 426 pr

This was the incident which led to the appointment of the Commission of Inquiry into the working of the Contagious Diseases Ordinance, the report of which Commission we have already had occasion to quote from more than once.

Later, Governor Hennessy wrote to the Colonial Office:

"Whilst the Attorney General is of opinion that, strictly speaking, there is a _prima facie_ case of manslaughter made out against Inspector Lee, and that possibly a conviction might be obtained, he advises against a prosecution. I do not concur with the Attorney General in the reasons he gives for not instituting a prosecution in this case."

and on that particular piece of evidence no action was taken by the department."

Lord Carnarvon was Secretary of State for the Colonies at this time, and his replies to Sir John Pope Hennessy were small encouragement to the course the Governor had taken. He criticises his "somewhat unusual course" in the appointment of a

Sorry Mark, it appears that they are telling the truth. I guess you have been plonked by Terranews....Bwahahahah!

But! But! All this time Markie has been telling us that he hasn't been blocked...he's simply waiting for the Teranews backlog to clear so he can resume posting. Of course Mark has known better all along, and he lied, which is why he's moved on to other news servers in the interim.

is to be feared that henceforth the practice of infanticide will extremely increase beyond what it ever was. The heinousness of the violation of the great Creator's benevolence, which constitutes infanticide, is beyond comparison with the indulgence granted to the system of buying and selling children to prolong their existence."

As though these benevolent persons only bought slaves for this one laudable purpose, to preserve their lives! "As regards the buyers, they look upon themselves as affording relief to distressed people, and consider the matter as an act akin to charity," etc.

A flood of light is let in upon the matter of the reluctance of British officials to move in the putting down of domestic slavery and the buying and selling of boys among the natives, in the following well-deserved thrust at the weak point in the armor of the British officials:

"The office of the Registrar-General was charged with the superintendence of prostitutes and the licensing of brothels and similar affairs. But _from 80 to 90 per cent of all these prostitutes in Hong Kong were brought into these brothels by purchase, as is well known to everybody_. If buying and selling is a matter of a criminal character, the proper thing would be, first of all, to abolish this evil (brothel slavery). But how comes it that since the first establishment of the Colony down to the present day the same old practice prevails in these licensed brothels, and has never been forbidden or abolished?"

This was a center shot, and calculated to weaken the hands of at least the guilty officials. What could they say? Were the officials prepared, since the report of the Commission a declared herself to be a married woman, and that her husband was in California, on a steamer; that the girls were not hers, and that she was "not in the habit of sending girls to California." The third defendant deposed that she came from Canton to ask A-Neung for some money, and added: "I never buy and sell girls." Fourth defendant claimed to be utterly ignorant of the girls being sent to California, and said she was supported by Tai-Ku; the fifth defendant declared she knew nothing of the buying and selling of girls; and the sixth defendant claimed she had gone to the house to obtain the payment of a debt; she was discharged.

The sentence was:--First, second, third, fourth and fifth defendants to find two securities, householders, in $500 each, to appear at any time within the next six months, to answer any charge in any court in the Colony.

Whether the girls were sent to California to swell the number of wretched slaves on the Pacific Coast, or remained in slavery in Hong Kong, there is no record to be found; nor, even with abundant evidence concerning this licensed brothel which the Inspector himself declared he was long familiar with as a place "where young girls were kept to be shipped off to California," and with the evident collusion between A-Neung and Tai-Ku

UK Memorial

It is a matter of history that when Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces, General Dwight Eisenhower, found the victims of the death camps he ordered all possible photographs to be taken, and for the German people from surrounding villages to be ushered through the camps and even made to bury the dead.

He did this because he said in words to this effect: "Get it all on record now
- get the films - get the witnesses -because somewhere down the track of history some bastard will get up and say that this never happened"

"All that is necessary for the triumph of evil is for good men to do nothing."
Edmund Burke

In Memorial

This week, the UK removed The Holocaust from its school curriculum because it "offended" the Muslim population which claims it never occurred. This is a frightening portent of the fear that is gripping the world and how easily each country is giving into it.

It is now more than 60 years after the Second World War in Europe ended. This e-mail is being sent as a memorial chain, in memory of the:

six million Jews,

20 million Russians,

10 million Christians,

and 1,900 Catholic priests, who were murdered, massacred, raped, burned, starved and humiliated while the German and Russian peoples looking the other way!

Now, more than ever, with Iran, among others, claiming the Holocaust to be "a myth," it is imperative to make sure the world never forgets.

This e-mail is intended to reach 40 million people worldwide!

Be a link in the memorial chain and help distribute this around the world.

How many years will it be before the attack on the World Trade Center "never happened" because it offends some Muslim in the U.S. ??????

Don't just delete this. It will take a minute to pass this along.

HAM RADIO IN POLITICS: CANDIDATE MITT ROMNEY AND HAM RADIO

Republican presidential contender Mitt Romney says that he never intended to demean Amateur radio in n exchange with a television reporter two years ago. This, as the debate over his comments flares anew on the ham bands and on hobby radio blogging websites nationwide. Amateur Radio Newsline's Don Wilbanks was the one who contacted Mitt Romney and asked him to explain:

It all began during a televised Town Meeting that aired on November 16th of 2005 on segment 2 of WCVB television's "When Disaster Strikes" The program featured public safety and volunteer organization officials from across Massachusetts. Moderator Natalie Jacobson had asked Governor Romney questions about communications interoperability, and communication without commercial power.

During the exchange Jacobson commented '...so you don't see yourself getting down to ham radio operators?...' The then governor replied: "No, we don't need to deal with ham radio operators. We have power systems that allow us to speak with one another and to manage our response."

Hams across Massachusetts and eventually across the nation only seemed to hear the words "we don't need to deal with ham radio operators" and reacted negatively. This, even though the remark was taken out of context. Most hams never bothered to find out what really transpired even though the entire program has been available on the WCVB website since it was broadcast. Instead they relied on inaccurate and incomplete information being passed along on the World Wide Web.

The issue eventually died away only to reappear on the ham radio blogs in recent weeks as a result of Romney seeking the Republican party's nomination to run for the U-S presidency. For example, in the Talk and Opinion area of QRZ.com there is a subject titled: "Do we want a President who hates ham radio?" Reading the ongoing discussion shows that few of those taking part have ever have seen or heard the show in question,

So on Friday, January 18th I decided to see if Mitt Romney would be willing to address this issue in a clear an concise manner. So I wrote him the following e-mail:

" Mr. Romney,

In November of 2005 in a televised town meeting you commented that in an emergency you "don't need to deal with ham radio operators".

My family lived in the greater New Orleans area when Hurricane Katrina hit. Hams made huge contributions down here. I am also a licensed ham, AE5DW.

My question is simple: Tell me how I can support you if you don't support us?
Thank you.

Don Wilbanks, AE5DW"

I did not know if I would get a response or not, but felt it was worth the effort to find out if Mitt Romney even remembered the incident and if so, what he might have to say. On Tuesday, January 22nd I received the following response via email in which the key paragraph read:

"Dear Don:

Thank you for following up with me on the responsibility of Ham Radio Operators. The exchange with Natalie Jacobsen was meant to imply that we need to strengthen our emergency response infrastructure, rather than demean the important role I recognize that Ham Radio Operators play around our country. I hope this will clear up any confusion. Again, thank you for contacting me. "

Whether the response came directly from Mitt Romney or one of his aids is hard to say. The reference made to WCVB's Natalie Jacobsen would tend to indicate that whoever actually wrote the response was aware of what transpired during the on-the-air exchange.

And as I mentioned earlier, the entire segment of the program "When Disaster Strikes" can be seen at the WCVB website. The exact U-R-L is www.thebostonchannel.com/video/5334306/index.html

Now living in Picayune, Mississippi, I'm Don Wilbanks, AE5DW.

Mitt Romney's response also warrants the question as to where all of the other candidates -- both Democrats and Republicans stand on issues important to ham radio operators. We will be looking into this in future Amateur Radio Newsline reports. (AE5DW, ARNewsline(tm))

RESCUE RADIO: HAM RADIO OPERATOR HELPS RESCUE STRANDED FAMILY IN THE SWIS ALPS

Six Ukrainian immigrants seeking asylum see have been rescued after getting lost in the snowy Swiss Alps and an unidentified ham radio operator is being credited with saving their lives.

The mother and her five children ran into difficulties while trying to cross illegally from Italy into Switzerland. They were saved late on after a Swiss citizen described as local radio amateur picked up their distress call made by the mother using a child's walkie-talkie.

The mother and her children, aged nine to 21, got stranded near Monte Lema, a 5,250 foot high mountain in the area of Ticino. According to regional police spokesman Marco Bordoli the family's calls for help in broken English were picked up by an Italian amateur radio operator who then alerted the authorities.

Police found the asylum seekers at 1700 local time (1400 GMT), and they were then airlifted by helicopter.

Three members of the family were taken to hospital with frostbite. Bordoli said the Ukrainians have already asked for political asylum and that their case would be heard by the public prosecutor's office. The ham radio operator is being praised as a hero. (BBC, SwissNews.com)

RESCUE RADIO: ACCIDENT HITS 3Y0E DXPEDITION

Problems for the DX-pedition operating from Bouveit Island. The Ohio Penn D-X newsletter has received a report that Petrus Kritzinger, 3Y0E, whose callsign is being used for the operation is occupied with an emergency situation. Word is that one of the team members has been bitten by an elephant seal and Petrus, who is the medic on the Island is currently looking after that unidentified person. Its not known how critical the bite is.

In a related development, ZS6DXB who is the Pilot station and Media Officer for the 3Y0E has announced that due to high QRM from Europe and a lot of requests from people with restricted licenses, they have moved 3Y0E operating frequency. 3Y0E is now on 14.260 MHz working split 5 to 10 kHz up the band. RADIO RECORDS: WA1ZMS AND W4WWQ GO 114 KM ON 241 GHZ

A pair of United states hams are now the likely distance holders for a contact on the 241Gigahertz band.

At 01:24 U-T-C on January 31st, Brian Justin, WA1ZMS portable 4 operating from Grid Square FM07 made contact with Peter Lascell, W4WWQ, also operating portable 4 from Grid Square EM96. That's a distance of 114.4km and beating out the old record of 79 km by 35.4 Km.

WA1ZMS says that the QSO was over 2 years in the making with several failed attempts at even shorter distances during that time period. He says that the key to success this time was the very driest of winter air that may only take place one day a year in his part of the country. The mode used for the contact was CW. HAM RADIO POLITICS: NEW MEMERS APPOINTED TO ARRL ELECTION ETHICS AND ELECTIONS COMMITTEE

The ARRL Board of Directors held their Annual January meeting January 18th and 19th in Houston, Texas. Among other things on the agenda was the election of ARRL officers, as well as members of the Executive, Administration and Finance, and Programs and Services Committees. Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, is in the newsroom with more:

About the only item made public so far that will be of interest to most hams is a change in the membership of the Ethics and Elections Committee. But its not taken place as the result of the recent disqualification's of a potential candidate for office in Southern California and the public backlash that resulted. Rather, its just a normal change that occurs almost every year.

As a result there are three new Board members now sitting on the Ethics and Elections Committee. These are Director Coy Day, N5OK; Frank Fallon, N2FF, and Greg Sarratt, W4OZK.

According to an ARRL news release, the new members of the Ethics and Elections Committee are Directors not up for re-election in 2008. As per the ARRL By-Laws, this committee applies guidelines for ethical conduct by ARRL officials, determines eligibility of candidates for Director and Vice Director, certifies a nominee's eligibility to fill a Vice Director vacancy and supervises the balloting for Director and Vice Director.

A hint at what else might have discussed appears in a publication called the e-Communicator. It was sent to members in the ARRL's Southwestern Division following the meeting. In it, Director Dick Norton writes:

" The last e-Communicator's request for items to be brought up at the just concluded ARRL Board of Director's meeting resulted in requests for action to try to overturn CC&R prohibitions against antennas. Note that the ARRL already has a program attempting to do this."

Reference is then made to last years attempt. Norton concludes by stating: "It is not at all clear that such a bill is likely to ever become law, but the League is trying. A similar bill made it through one house of the Arizona state legislature in 2007, but was unable to get through the state senate."

From the Newsroom in Los Angeles, I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF

Further details on the 2008 Annual Meeting will soon be available on the ARRL Web site and in the April 2008 issue of QST. (ARRL, SW Div E-Communicator)

ENFORCEMENT: UNLICENSED COLLEGE STATION WARNED TO STOP OPERATING

The FCC's San Diego Office has warned Mt. San Jacinto Community College in California to take an unlicensed broadcast radio station off the air.
On December 27th 2007 the regulatory agency notified the Mt. San Jacinto Community College that it was aware of a transmitter on 1620 kHz in the A-M broadcast band allegedly operating from the school. This, after an agent confirmed by radio direction finding on December 14th that the transmitter was located at the Music Building inside the Mt. San Jacinto campus.

The Commission says that its records show that no license was issued for operation of a broadcast station on 1620 kHz at that location. It warned the school that operation of radio transmitting equipment without a valid radio station authorization constitutes a violation of the Federal law. That it could subject the operator to severe penalties, including substantial monetary fines, seizure of the radio equipment, and criminal sanctions.

Mt. San Jacinto Community College was given 10 days from the date of the violation notice to respond and let the FCC know it had taken action to remove the transmitter from the airwaves. That date is now past. No word if school has responded to the notice from the FCC. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: OPERATING WITHOUT A LICENSE BRINGS $10,000 FINE

The FCC has affirmed a $10,000 monetary forfeiture to Eliandro B. Ramos, of Boston, Massachusetts. . This, for willfully and repeatedly violating Section 301 of the Communications Act by operating on the frequency of 296.550 MHz without Commission authorization.

Back on April 26, 2007, the Commission's Boston Field Office issued the $10,000 Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture to Ramos for operating without a license. Ramos never disputed the accusations but requests a cancellation of the forfeiture based on his inability to pay. The Commission reviewed the personal income tax returns submitted by Ramos and found that the forfeiture represents a percentage of gross income that falls within the range that has been found acceptable.

Ramos was given the usual 30 days from release of the January 16th order to pay or file a further appeal. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: FLORIDA PIRATE BROADCASTER SHUT DOWN USING STATE LAW

An illegal Florida radio station that authorities said was on air to "glamorize and encourage criminal gangster activity" was shut down Friday afternoon January 11th. Three people were arrested in connection the underground station that played a genre known as "gangsta rap" that often features crude and offensive lyrics.

Using state laws, the Polk County Sheriff's office arrested station operator Calvin Thompson, along with disc jockey's Wesley C. Williams Jr., and Jimessia Spillman. The three were booked into the Polk County Jail, accused of one count each of unauthorized transmission and interference with a licensed radio station. The offense is a third-degree felony.

According to Sheriff Grady Judd, his office worked in partnership with the State Attorney's Office and Federal Communications Commission to shut down the illegal operation. The radio station was operating without an FCC license.

RESCUE RADIO: COLORADO TV STATION BURNS DOWN

KREX television in Grand Junction, Colorado, was destroyed by a fire early the morning of January 20th. The blaze reportedly started around nine AM. Fire fighters called their first effort defensive.

That means they had to fight the fire from the outside of the building. At one point a fire fighter tried to enter the building and was blown down by force.

Four of five Grand Junction Fire Department station units were called to the scene. The cause of the fire is not known at this time, and thankfully no one has been injured. The station's General Manager says as a result of the damage, the building will likely have to be demolished.

THE CHANGING OF THE GUARD: FORMER WORLDRADIO EDITOR LOUANN KEOGH, KB6HP, - SK

The changing of the guard in Amateur Radio continues. This with the sad news that former Editor of Worldradio Magazine, Lou Ann Keogh, KB6HP, as died.

According to Carl Schultz, W6FJ, Keogh was found in her Sacramento, California, home by her family on Thursday afternoon January 17th. Her daughter Jenny told Carl that it appeared as if she had gone peacefully.

In addition to her work at Worldradio, Keogh was a member of North Hills Radio Club in Sacramento and a frequent contributor to Amateur Radio Newsline. After her departure from Worldradio in 1997, she became a freelance manuscript editor working on a number projects including several with our producer Bill Pasternak. This includes a series currently running in the QCWA Journal titled "Geeks."

No funeral service is planned. She will be buried in the cemetery alongside her husband Ed Keogh, WB6ETN, who preceded her to the grave. According to her son Matt, the two met via ham radio. (W6FJ, ARNewsline(tm))

WORLDBEAT - PORTUGAL: CT JOINS THE D-STAR REVOLUTUION

Portugal has joined the world-wide D-Star revolution. This with word that a new D-Star repeater is now operational near the city of Leiria.

Nuno Santos, CT1EWA, the President of the Associação de Radioamadores do Distrito de Leiria, has announced that CQ0DLR is fully operational on the European R U 58 channel pair. That means its receiving on 430.925 MHz and retransmitting what it hears on 438.525 MHz. This is an input to output spacing of 7.6 MHz which is slowly becoming a sort of unofficial standard in parts of southern Europe for D-Star machines.

Like most other D-Star repeaters, CQ0DLR is connected to the world-wide D-Star Internet gateway. That means it can be connected to from anywhere in the world that there is a user with a D-Star equipped mobile, base or even an H-T.

More information is on the new Portuguese D-Star system is at the A-R-A-L web site. Its U-R-L in this weeks printed Newsline report.

WORLDBEAT-FRANCE: DRM AND T-DMB SELECTED

France has acted to standardize digital radio broadcasting, but not necessarily in unison with the rest of Europe. Jeff Clark, K8JAC, has more:

A French government official has signed a decree sanctioning implementation of DRM and T-DMB Audio in VHF band III and L band. This, as the terrestrial digital radio standards to be implemented in that country.

D-R-M stands for Digital Radio Mondiale. T-DMB Audio refers to the South Korea developed Terrestrial Digital Multimedia Broadcasting standard used for video to mobile telephones that is part of the Eurkea-147 family of standards.

The adoption of T-DMB Audio instead of DAB+, which is more spectrum efficient for audio services, was explained by a desire to include images and additional multimedia services alongside digital radio channels.

No word on when the complete switchover to digital audio broadcasting will take place in France. (RW)

Oh, come on!!

Some guy in Southern Mississippi writes to a Romney email address and most probably got a reply from a staffer. Do you think that Romney himself mans the mailboxes?

Then, you exaggerate the whole thing into "Newsline" talking with Romney, which is a prevarication worthy of the National Enquirer or of Newsmax.

Talk about self-serving "journalism" ... <SPIT!>

Huh?

Someone posted the old story here, and someone pointed out that it was two years old. I know I said something about how maybe they should check to see if there was a recant or some later story, since there might have been action at the time.

The people at Newsline may have seen the thread, I know I once posted about the death of someone famous who happened to be a ham and got email about it from someone well known to be connected with Newsline, and thought there was a story there, to see whether there had been a change.

Or, since someone saw fit to dredge up the story, it's possible that there were people who were even outraged by it, not noticing the stale date of the "news", and wrote called or emailed someone at the former governor's office or the ARRL or Newsline. Suddenly there's a spike of such complaints, so then maybe it's worth exploring.
You follow the story if you're in the news business. Unlike the whoever posted the "story" here originally who never looked far enough to notice the date or to check on later developments (or perhaps he wasn't clueless and it was deliberate to bring up a stale story no matter what the date), what happened two years ago may not be as important as what happened later.

Leon Degrelle
"We have the power. Now our gigantic work begins."
Those were Hitler's words on the night of January 30, 1933, as cheering crowds surged past him, for five long hours, beneath the windows of the Chancellery in Berlin.
His political struggle had lasted 14 years. He himself was 43, that is, physically and intellectually at the peak of his powers. He had won over millions of Germans and organized them into Germany's largest and most dynamic political party, a party girded by a human rampart of hundreds of thousands of storm troopers, three fourths of them members of the working class. He had been extremely shrewd. All but toying with his adversaries, Hitler had, one after another, vanquished them all.
Standing there at the window, his arm raised to the delirious throng, he must have known a feeling of triumph. But he seemed almost torpid, absorbed, as if lost in another world.
It was a world far removed from the delirium in the street, a world of 65 million citizens who loved him or hated him, but all of whom, from that night on, had become his responsibility. And as he knew-as almost all Germans knew on January 1933 -- that this was a crushing, an almost desperate responsibility.
Half a century later, few people understand the crisis Germany faced at that time. Today, it's easy to assume that Germans have always been well-fed and even plump. But the Germans Hitler inherited were virtual skeletons.
During the preceding years, a score of "democratic" governments had come and gone, often in utter confusion. Instead of alleviating the people's misery, they had increased it, due to their own instability: it was impossible for them to pursue any given plan for more than a year or two. Germany had arrived at a dead end. In just a few years there had been 224,000 suicides - a horrifying figure, bespeaking a state of misery even more horrifying.
By the beginning of 1933, the misery of the German people was virtually universal. At least six million unemployed and hungry workers roamed aimlessly through the streets, receiving a pitiful unemployment benefit of less than 42 marks per month. Many of those out of work had families to feed, so that altogether some 20 million Germans, a third of the country's population, were reduced to trying to survive on about 40 pfennigs per person per day.
Unemployment benefits, moreover, were limited to a period of six months. After that came only the meager misery allowance dispensed by the welfare offices.
Notwithstanding the gross inadequacy of this assistance, by trying to save the six million unemployed from total destruction, even for just six months, both the state and local branches of the German government saw themselves brought to ruin: in 1932 alone such aid had swallowed up four billion marks, 57 percent of the total tax revenues of the federal government and the regional states. A good many German municipalities were bankrupt.

Those still lucky enough to have some kind of job were not much better off. Workers and employees had taken a cut of 25 percent in their wages and salaries. Twenty-one percent of them were earning between 100 and 250 marks per month; 69.2 percent of them, in January of 1933, were being paid less than 1,200 marks annually. No more than about 100,000 Germans, it was estimated, were able to live without financial worries.

During the three years before Hitler came to power, total earnings had fallen by more than half, from 23 billion marks to 11 billion. The average per capita income had dropped from 1,187 marks in 1929 to 627 marks, a scarcely tolerable level, in 1932. By January 1933, when Hitler took office, 90 percent of the German people were destitute.

No one escaped the strangling effects of the unemployment. The intellectuals were hit as hard as the working class. Of the 135,000 university graduates, 60 percent were without jobs. Only a tiny minority was receiving unemployment benefits.

"The others," wrote one foreign observer, Marcel Laloire (in his book New Germany), "are dependent on their parents or are sleeping in flophouses. In the daytime they can be seen on the boulevards of Berlin wearing signs on their backs to the effect that they will accept any kind of work."

But there was no longer any kind of work.

The same drastic fall-off had hit Germany's cottage industry, which comprised some four million workers. Its turnover had declined 55 percent, with total sales plunging from 22 billion to 10 billion marks.

Hardest hit of all were construction workers; 90 percent of them were unemployed.

Farmers, too, had been ruined, crushed by losses amounting to 12 billion marks. Many had been forced to mortgage their homes and their land. In 1932 just the interest on the loans they had incurred due to the crash was equivalent to 20 percent of the value of the agricultural production of the entire country. Those who were no longer able to meet the interest payments saw their farms auctioned off in legal proceedings: in the years 1931-1932, 17,157 farms-with a combined total area of 462,485 hectares - were liquidated in this way.

The "democracy" of Germany's "Weimar Republic" (1918 -1933) had proven utterly ineffective in addressing such flagrant wrongs as this impoverishment of millions of farm workers, even though they were the nation's most stable and hardest working citizens. Plundered, dispossessed, abandoned: small wonder they heeded Hitler's call.

Their situation on January 30, 1933, was tragic. Like the rest of Germany's working class, they had been betrayed by their political leaders, reduced to the alternatives of miserable wages, paltry and uncertain benefit payments, or the outright humiliation of begging. Germany's industries, once renowned everywhere in the world, were no longer prosperous, despite the millions of marks in gratuities that the financial magnates felt obliged to pour into the coffers of the parties in power before each election in order to secure their cooperation. For 14 years the well-blinkered conservatives and Christian democrats of the political center had been feeding at the trough just as greedily as their adversaries of the leftï¿½

One inevitable consequence of this ever-increasing misery and uncertainty about the future was an abrupt decline in the birthrate. When your household savings are wiped out, and when you fear even greater calamities in the days ahead, you do not risk adding to the number of your dependents.
In those days the birth rate was a reliable barometer of a country's prosperity. A child is a joy, unless you have nothing but a crust of bread to put in its little hand. And that's just the way it was with hundreds of thousands of German families in 1932ï¿½
Hitler knew that he would be starting from zero. From less than zero. But he was also confident of his strength of will to create Germany anew-politically, socially, financially, and economically. Now legally and officially in power, he was sure that he could quickly convert that cipher into a Germany more powerful than ever before.
What support did he have?
For one thing, he could count on the absolute support of millions of fanatical disciples. And on that January evening, they joyfully shared in the great thrill of victory. Some thirteen million Germans, many of them former Socialists and Communists, had voted for his party.
But millions of Germans were still his adversaries, disconcerted adversaries, to be sure, whom their own political parties had betrayed, but who had still not been won over to National Socialism. The two sides-those for and those against Hitler-were very nearly equal in numbers. But whereas those on the left were divided among themselves, Hitler's disciples were strongly united. And in one thing above all, the National Socialists had an incomparable advantage: in their convictions and in their total faith in a leader. Their highly organized and well-disciplined party had contented with the worst kind of obstacles, and had overcome themï¿½
In the eyes of the capitalists, money was the sole active element in the flourishing of a country's economy. To Hitler's way of thinking, that conception was radically wrong: capital, on the contrary, was only an instrument. Work was the essential element: man's endeavor, man's honor, blood, muscles and soul.
Hitler wanted not just to put an to the class struggle, but to reestablish the priority of the human being, in justice and respect, as the principal factor in productionï¿½
For the worker's trust in the fatherland to be restored, he had to feel that from now on he was to be (and to be treated) as an equal, instead of remaining a social inferior. Under the governments of the so-called democratic parties of both the left and the right, he had remained an inferior; for none of them had understood that in the hierarchy of national values, work is the very essence of life; ï¿½

The objective, then, was far greater than merely getting six million unemployed back to work. It was to achieve a total revolution.
"The people," Hitler declared, "were not put here on earth for the sake of the economy, and the economy doesn't exist for the sake of capital. On the contrary, capital is meant to serve the economy, and the economy in turn to serve the people."
It would not be enough merely to reopen the thousands of closed factories and fill them with workers. If the old concepts still ruled, the workers would once again be nothing more than living machines, faceless and interchangeableï¿½
Nowhere in twentieth-century Europe had the authority of a head of state ever been based on such overwhelming and freely given national consent. Prior to Hitler, from 1919 to 1932, those governments piously styling themselves democratic had usually come to power by meager majorities, sometimes as low as 51 or 52 percent.
"I am not a dictator," Hitler had often affirmed, "and I never will be. Democracy will be rigorously enforced by National Socialism."
Authority does not mean tyranny. A tyrant is someone who puts himself in power without the will of the people or against the will of the people. A democrat is placed in power by the people. But democracy is not limited to a single formula. It may be partisan or parliamentary. Or it may be authoritarian. The important thing is that the people have wished it, chosen it, established it in its given form.
That was the case with Hitler. He came to power in an essentially democratic way. Whether one likes it or not, this fact is undeniable. And after coming to power, his popular support measurably increased from year to year. The more intelligent and honest of his enemies have been obliged to admit this, men such as the declared anti-Nazi historian and professor Joachim Fest, who wrote:
For Hitler was never interested in establishing a mere tyranny. Sheer greed for power will not suffice as explanation for his personality and energy-He was not born to be a mere tyrant. He was fixated upon his mission of defending Europe and the Aryan race ... Never had he felt so dependent upon the masses as he did at this time, and he watched their reactions with anxious concern.
These lines weren't written by Dr. Goebbels, but by a stern critic of Hitler and his careerï¿½
When it came time to vote, Hitler was granted plenary powers with a sweeping majority of 441 votes to 94: he had won not just two thirds, but 82.44 percent of the assembly's votes. This "Enabling Act" granted Hitler for four years virtually absolute authority over the legislative as well as the executive affairs of the governmentï¿½
After 1945 the explanation that was routinely offered for all this was that the Germans had lost their heads. Whatever the case, it is a historical fact that they acted of their own free will. Far from being resigned, they were enthusiastic. "For the first time since the last days of the monarchy," historian Joachim Fest has conceded, "the majority of the Germans now had the feeling that they could identify with the state."ï¿½

"You talk about persecution!" he thundered in an impromptu response to an address by the Social Democratic speaker. "I think that there are only a few of us [in our party] here who did not have to suffer persecutions in prison from your side ... You seem to have totally forgotten that for years our shirts were ripped off our backs because you did not like the color . . . We have outgrown your persecutions!" "In those days," he scathingly continued, "our newspapers were banned and banned and again banned, our meetings were forbidden, and we were forbidden to speak, I was forbidden to speak, for years on. And now you say that criticism is salutary!"ï¿½
Hitler's millions of followers had rediscovered the primal strength of rough, uncitified man, of a time when men still had backboneï¿½
Gustav Noske, the lumberjack who became defense minister - and the most valiant defender of the embattled republic in the tumultuous months immediately following the collapse of 1918 - acknowledged honestly in 1944, when the Third Reich was already rapidly breaking down, that the great majority of the German people still remained true to Hitler because of the social renewal he had brought to the working classï¿½
Here again, well before the collapse of party-ridden Weimar Republic, disillusion with the unions had become widespread among the working masses. They were starving. The hundreds of Socialist and Communist deputies stood idly by, impotent to provide any meaningful help to the desperate proletariat.
Their leaders had no proposals to remedy, even partially, the great distress of the people; no plans for large-scale public works, no industrial restructuring, no search for markets abroad.
Moreover, they offered no energetic resistance to the pillaging by foreign countries of the Reich's last financial resources: this a consequence of the Treaty of Versailles that the German Socialists had voted to ratify in June of 1919, and which they had never since had the courage effectively to opposeï¿½
In 1930, 1931 and 1932, German workers had watched the disaster grow: the number of unemployed rose from two million to three, to four, to five, then to six million. At the same time, unemployment benefits fell lower and lower, finally to disappear completely. Everywhere one saw dejection and privation: emaciated mothers, children wasting away in sordid lodgings, and thousands of beggars in long sad lines.
The failure, or incapacity, of the leftist leaders to act, not to mention their insensitivity, had stupefied the working class. Of what use were such leaders with their empty heads and empty hearts-and, often enough, full pockets?
Well before January 30, thousands of workers had already joined up with Hitler's dynamic formations, which were always hard at it where they were most needed. Many joined the National Socialists when they went on strike. Hitler, himself a former worker and a plain man like themselves, was determined to eliminate unemployment root and branch. He wanted not merely to defend the laborer's right to work, but to make his calling one of honor, to insure him respect and to integrate him fully into a living community of all the Germans, who had been divided class against class.

In January 1933, Hitler's victorious troops were already largely proletarian in character, including numerous hardfisted street brawlers, many unemployed, who no longer counted economically or socially.
Meanwhile, membership in the Marxist labor unions had fallen off enormously: among thirteen million socialist and Communist voters in 1932, no more than five million were union members. Indifference and discouragement had reached such levels that many members no longer paid their union dues. Many increasingly dispirited Marxist leaders began to wonder if perhaps the millions of deserters were the ones who saw things clearly. Soon they wouldn't wonder any longer.
Even before Hitler won Reichstag backing for his "Enabling Act," Germany's giant labor union federation, the ADGB, had begun to rally to the National Socialist cause. As historian Joachim Fest acknowledged: "On March 20, the labor federation's executive committee addressed a kind of declaration of loyalty to Hitler." (J. Fest, Hitler, p. 413.)
Hitler than took a bold and clever step. The unions had always clamored to have the First of May recognized as a worker's holiday, but the Weimar Republic had never acceded to their request. Hitler, never missing an opportunity, grasped this one with both hands. He did more than grant this reasonable demand: he proclaimed the First of May a national holidayï¿½
I myself attended the memorable meeting at the Tempelhof field in 1933. By nine o'clock that morning, giant columns, some of workers, others of youth groups, marching in cadence down the pavement of Berlin's great avenues, had started off towards the airfield to which Hitler had called together all Germans. All Germany would follow the rally as it was transmitted nationwide by radioï¿½
In the dark, a group of determined opponents could easily have heckled Hitler or otherwise sabotaged the meeting. Perhaps a third of the onlookers had been Socialists or Communists only three months previously. But not a single hostile voice was raised during the entire ceremony. There was only universal acclamation.
Ceremony is the right word for it. It was an almost magical rite. Hitler and Goebbels had no equals in the arranging of dedicatory ceremonies of this sort. First there were popular songs, then great Wagnerian hymns to grip the audience. Germany has a passion for orchestral music, and Wagner taps the deepest and most secret vein of the German soul, its romanticism, its inborn sense of the powerful and the grand.
Meanwhile the hundreds of flags floated above the rostrum, redeemed from the darkness by arrows of light.
Now Hitler strode to the rostrum. For those standing at the of the field, his face must have appeared vanishingly small, but his words flooded instantaneously across the acres of people in his audience.
A Latin audience would have preferred a voice less harsh, more delicately expressive. But there was no doubt that Hitler spoke to the psyche of the German people.

Germans have rarely had the good fortune to experience the enchantment of the spoken word. In Germany, the tone has always been set by ponderous speakers, more fond of elephantine pedantry than oratorical passion. Hitler, as a speaker, was a prodigy, the greatest orator of his century. He possessed, above all, what the ordinary speaker lacks: a mysterious ability to project power.

A bit like a medium or sorcerer, he was seized, even transfixed, as he addressed a crowd. It responded to Hitler's projection of power, radiating it back, establishing, in the course of myriad exchanges, a current that both orator and audience gave to and drew from equally. One had to personally experience him speaking to understand this phenomenon.

This special gift is what lay at the basis of Hitler's ability to win over the masses. His high-voltage, lightning-like projection transported and transformed all who experienced it. Tens of millions were enlightened, riveted and inflamed by the fire of his anger, irony, and passion.

By the time the cheering died away that May first evening, hundreds of thousands of previously indifferent or even hostile workers who had come to Tempelhof at the urging of their labor federation leaders were now won over. They had become followers, like the SA stormtroopers whom so many there that evening had brawled with in recent years.

The great human sea surged back from Tempelhof to Berlin. A million and a half people had arrived in perfect order, and their departure was just as orderly. No bottlenecks halted the cars and busses. For those of us who witnessed it, this rigorous, yet joyful, discipline of a contented people was in itself a source of wonder. Everything about the May Day mass meeting had come off as smoothly clockwork.

The memory of that fabulous crowd thronging back to the center of Berlin will never leave me. A great many were on foot. Their faces were now different faces, as though they had been imbued with a strange and totally new spirit. The non-Germans in the crowd were as if stunned, and no less impressed than Hitler's fellow countrymen. The French ambassador, Andrï¿½ Franï¿½ois-Poncet, noted:

The foreigners on the speaker's platform as guests of honor were not alone in carrying away the impression of a truly beautiful and wonderful public festival, an impression that was created by the regime's genius for organization, by the night time display of uniforms, by the play of lights, the rhythm of the music, by the flags and the colorful fireworks; and they were not alone in thinking that a breath of reconciliation and unity was passing over the Third Reich.

"It is our wish," Hitler had exclaimed, as though taking heaven as his witness, "to get along together and to struggle together as brothers, so that at the hour when we shall come before God, we might say to him: 'See, Lord, we have changed. The German people are no longer a people ashamed, a people mean and cowardly and divided. No, Lord! The German people have become strong in their spirit, in their will, in their perseverance, in their acceptance of any sacrifice. Lord, we remain faithful to Thee! Bless our struggle!" (A. Franï¿½ois-Poncet, Souvenirs d'une ambassade ï¿½ Berlin, p. 128.)

Who else could have made such an incantatory appeal without making himself look ridiculous?
No politician had ever spoken of the rights of workers with such faith and such force, or had laid out in such clear terms the social plan he pledged to carry out on behalf of the common people.
The next day, the newspaper of the proletarian left, the "Union Journal," reported on this mass meeting at which at least two thirds-a million-of those attending were workers. "This May First was victory day," the paper summed up.
With the workers thus won over, what further need was there for the thousands of labor union locals that for so long had poisoned the social life of the Reich and which, in any case, had accomplished nothing of a lasting, positive nature?
Within hours of the conclusion of that "victory" meeting at the Tempelhof field, the National Socialists were able to peacefully take complete control of Germany's entire labor union organization, including all its buildings, enterprises and banks. An era of Marxist obstruction abruptly came to an end : from now on, a single national organization would embody the collective will and interests of all of Germany's workers.
Although he was now well on his way to creating what he pledged would be a true "government of the people," Hitler also realized that great obstacles remained. For one thing, the Communist rulers in Moscow had not dropped their guard-or their guns. Restoring the nation would take more than words and promises, it would take solid achievements. Only then would the enthusiasm shown by the working class at the May First mass meeting be an expression of lasting victory.
How could Hitler solve the great problem that had defied solution by everyone else (both in Germany and abroad): putting millions of unemployed back to work?
What would Hitler do about wages? Working hours? Leisure time? Housing? How would he succeed in winning, at long last, respect for the rights and dignity of the worker?
How could men's lives be improved-materially, morally, and, one might even say, spiritually? How would he proceed to build a new society fit for human beings, free of the inertia, injustices and prejudices of the past?
"National Socialism," Hitler had declared at the outset, "has its mission and its hour; it is not just a passing movement but a phase of history."
The instruments of real power now in his hands-an authoritarian state, its provinces subordinate but nonetheless organic parts of the national whole-Hitler had acted quickly to shake himself free of the last constraints of the impotent sectarian political parties.
Moreover, he was now able to direct a cohesive labor force that was no longer split into a thousand rivulets but flowed as a single, mighty current.
Hitler was self-confident, sure of the power of his own conviction. He had no intention, or need, to resort to the use of physical force. Instead, he intended to win over, one by one, the millions of Germans who were still his adversaries, and even those who still hated him. His conquest of Germany had taken years of careful planning and hard work. Similarly, he would now realize his carefully worked out plans for transforming the state and society. This meant not merely changes in administrative or governmental structures, but far-reaching social programs.

He had once vowed: "The hour will come when the 15 million people who now hate us will be solidly behind us and will acclaim with us the new revival we shall create together." Eventually he would succeed in winning over even many of his most refractory skeptics and adversaries.

His army of converts was already forming ranks. In a remarkable tribute, historian Joachim Fest felt obliged to acknowledge unequivocally:

Hitler had moved rapidly from the status of a demagogue to that of a respected statesman. The craving to join the ranks of the victors was spreading like an epidemic, and the shrunken minority of those who resisted the urge were being visibly pushed into isolation-The past was dead. The future, it seemed, belonged to the regime, which had more and more followers, which was being hailed everywhere and suddenly had sound reasons on its side.

And even the prominent leftist writer Kurt Tucholsky, sensing the direction of the inexorable tide that was sweeping Germany, vividly commented: "You don't go railing against the ocean." (J. Fest, Hitler, pp. 415 f.)

"Our power," Hitler was now able to declare, "no longer belongs to any territorial fraction of the Reich, nor to any single class of the nation, but to the people in its totality."

Much still remained to be done, however. So far, Hitler had succeeded in clearing the way of obstacles to his program. Now the time to build had arrived.

So many others had failed to tackle the many daunting problems that were now his responsibility. Above all, the nation demanded a solution to the great problem of unemployment. Could Hitler now succeed where others had so dismally failed?ï¿½

Unemployment could be combated and eliminated only by giving industry the financial means to start up anew, to modernize, thus creating millions of new jobs.

The normal rate of consumption would not be restored, let alone increased, unless one first raised the starvation-level allowances that were making purchases of any kind a virtual impossibility. On the contrary, production and sales would have to be restored before the six million unemployed could once again become purchasers.

The great economic depression could be overcome only by restimulating industry, by bringing industry into step with the times, and by promoting the development of new productsï¿½

Nearly ten years earlier, while in his prison cell, Hitler had already envisioned a formidable system of national highways. He had also conceived of a small, easily affordable automobile (later known as the "Volkswagen"), and had even suggested its outline. It should have the shape of a June bug, he proposed. Nature itself suggested the car's aerodynamic line.

Until Hitler came to power, a car was the privilege of the rich. It was not financially within the reach of the middle class, much less of the worker. The "Volkswagen," costing one-tenth as much as the standard automobile of earlier years, would eventually become a popular work vehicle and a source of pleasure after work: a way to unwind and get some fresh air, and of discovering, thanks to the new Autobahn highway network, a magnificent country that then, in its totality, was virtually unknown to the German worker.
From the beginning, Hitler wanted this economical new car to be built for the millions. The production works would also become one of Germany's most important industrial centers and employers.
During his imprisonment, Hitler had also drawn up plans for the construction of popular housing developments and majestic public buildings.
Some of Hitler's rough sketches still survive. They include groups of individual worker's houses with their own gardens (which were to be built in the hundreds of thousands), a plan for a covered stadium in Berlin, and a vast congress hall, unlike any other in the world, that would symbolize the grandeur of the National Socialist revolution.
"A building with a monumental dome," historian Werner Maser has explained, "the plan of which he drew while he was writing Mein Kampf, would have a span of 46 meters, a height of 220 meters, a diameter of 250 meters, and a capacity of 150 to 190 thousand people standing. The interior of the building would have been 17 times larger than Saint Peter's Cathedral in Rome." (W. Maser, Hitler, Adolf, p. 100.)
"That hall," architect Albert Speer has pointed out, "was not just an idle dream impossible of achievement."
Hitler's imagination, therefore, had long been teeming with a number of ambitious projects, many of which would eventually be realized. Fortunately, the needed entrepreneurs, managers and technicians were on hand. Hitler would not have to improvise.
Historian Werner Maser, although quite anti-Hitler-like nearly all of his colleagues (how else would they have found publishers?) - has acknowledged: "From the beginning of his political career, he [Hitler] took great pains systematically to arrange for whatever he was going to need in order to carry out his plans."
"Hitler was distinguished," Maser has also noted, "by an exceptional intelligence in technical matters." Hitler had acquired his knowledge by devoting many thousands of hours to technical studies from the time of his youth.
"Hitler read an endless number of books," explained Dr. Schacht. "He acquired a very considerable amount of knowledge and made masterful use of it in discussions and speeches. In certain respects he was a man endowed with genius. He had ideas that no one else would ever have thought of, ideas that resulted in the ending of great difficulties, sometimes by measures of an astonishing simplicity or brutality."
Many billions of marks would be needed to begin the great socioeconomic revolution that was destined, as Hitler had always intended, to make Germany once again the European leader in industry and commerce and, most urgently, to rapidly wipe out unemployment in Germany. Where would the money be found? And, once obtained, how would these funds be allotted to ensure maximum effectiveness in their investment?

Hitler was by no means a dictator in matters of the economy. He was, rather, a stimulator. His government would undertake to do only that which private initiative could not.
Hitler believed in the importance of individual creative imagination and dynamism, in the need for every person of superior ability and skill to assume responsibility.
He also recognized the importance of the profit motive. Deprived of the prospect of having his efforts rewarded, the person of ability often refrains from running risks. The economic failure of Communism has demonstrated this. In the absence of personal incentives and the opportunity for real individual initiative, the Soviet "command economy" lagged in all but a few fields, its industry years behind its competitors.
State monopoly tolls the death of all initiative, and hence of all progress.
For all men selflessly to pool their wealth might be marvelous, but it is also contrary to human nature. Nearly every man desires that his labor shall improve his own condition and that of his family, and feels that his brain, creative imagination, and persistence well deserve their reward.
Because it disregarded these basic psychological truths, Soviet Communism, right to the end, wallowed in economic mediocrity, in spite of its immense reservoir of manpower, its technical expertise, and its abundant natural resources, all of which ought to have made it an industrial and technological giant.
Hitler was always adverse to the idea of state management of the economy. He believed in elites. "A single idea of genius," he used to say, "has more value than a lifetime of conscientious labor in an office."
Just as there are political or intellectual elites, so also is there an industrial elite. A manufacturer of great ability should not be restrained, hunted down by the internal revenue services like a criminal, or be unappreciated by the public. On the contrary, it is important for economic development that the industrialist be encouraged morally and materially, as much as possible.
The most fruitful initiatives Hitler would take from 1933 on would be on behalf of private enterprise. He would keep an eye on the quality of their directors, to be sure, and would shunt aside incompetents, quite a few of them at times, but he also supported the best ones, those with the keenest minds, the most imaginative and bold, even if their political opinions did not always agree with his own.
"There is no question," he stated very firmly, "of dismissing a factory owner or director under the pretext that he is not a National Socialist."
Hitler would exercise the same moderation, the same pragmatism, in the administrative as well as in the industrial sphere.

What he demanded of his co-workers, above all, was competence and effectiveness. The great majority of Third Reich functionaries - some 80 percent-were never enrolled in the National Socialist party. Several of Hitler's ministers, like Konstantin von Neurath and Schwerin von Krosigk, and ambassadors to such key posts as Prague, Vienna and Ankara, were not members of the party. But they were capableï¿½
"Herr Schacht," he said, "we are assuredly in agreement on one point: no other single task facing the government at the moment can be so truly urgent as conquering unemployment. That will take a lot of money. Do you see any possibility of finding it apart from the Reichsbank?" And after a moment, he added: "How much would it take? Do you have any idea?"
Wishing to win Schacht over by appealing to his ambition, Hitler smiled and then asked: "Would you be willing to once again assume presidency of the Reichsbank?" Schacht let on that he had a sentimental concern for Dr. Luther, and did not want to hurt the incumbent's feelings. Playing along, Hitler reassured Schacht that he would find an appropriate new job elsewhere for Luther.
Schacht then pricked up his ears, drew himself up, and focused his big round eyes on Hitler: "Well, if that's the way it is," he said, "then I am ready to assume the presidency of the Reichsbank again."
His great dream was being realized. Schacht had been president of the Reichsbank between 1923 and 1930, but had been dismissed. Now he would return in triumph. He felt vindicated. Within weeks, the ingenious solution to Germany's pressing financial woes would burst forth from his inventive brain.
"It was necessary," Schacht later explained, "to discover a method that would avoid inflating the investment holdings of the Reichsbank immoderately and consequently increasing the circulation of money excessively."
"Therefore," he went on, "I had to find some means of getting the sums that were lying idle in pockets and banks, without meaning for it to be long term and without having it undergo the risk of depreciation. That was the reasoning behind the Mefo bonds."
What were these "Mefo" bonds? Mefo was a contraction of the Metallurgische Forschungs-GmbH (Metallurgic Research Company). With a startup capitalization of one billion marks - which Hitler and Schacht arranged to be provided by the four giant firms of Krupp, Siemens, Deutsche Werke and Rheinmetall-this company would eventually promote many billions of marks worth of investment.
Enterprises, old and new, that filled government orders had only to draw drafts on Mefo for the amounts due. These drafts, when presented to the Reichsbank, were immediately convertible into cash. The success of the Mefo program depended entirely on public acceptance of the Mefo bonds. But the wily Schacht had planned well. Since Mefo bonds were short-term bonds that could be cashed in at any time, there was no real risk in buying, accepting or holding them. They bore an interest of four percent-a quite acceptable figure in those days-whereas banknotes hidden under the mattress earned nothing. The public quickly took all this into consideration and eagerly accepted the bonds.

While the Reichsbank was able to offer from its own treasury a relatively insignificant 150 million marks for Hitler's war on unemployment, in just four years the German public subscribed more than 12 billion marks worth of Mefo bonds!
These billions, the fruit of the combined imagination, ingenuity and astuteness of Hitler and Schacht, swept away the temporizing and fearful conservatism of the bankers. Over the next four years, this enormous credit reserve would make miracles possible.
Soon after the initial billion-mark credit, Schacht added another credit of 600 million in order to finance the start of Hitler's grand program for highway construction. This Autobahn program provided immediate work for 100,000 of the unemployed, and eventually assured wages for some 500,000 workers.
As large as this outlay was, it was immediately offset by a corresponding cutback in government unemployment benefits, and by the additional tax revenue generated as a result of the increase in living standard (sping) of the newly employed.
Within a few months, thanks to the credit created by the Mefo bonds, private industry once again dared to assume risks and expand. Germans returned to work by the hundreds of thousands.
Was Schacht solely responsible for this extraordinary turnaround? After the war, he answered for himself as a Nuremberg Tribunal defendant, where he was charged with having made possible the Reich's economic revival:
I don't think Hitler was reduced to begging for my help. If I had not served him, he would have found other methods, other means. He was not a man to give up. It's easy enough for you to say, Mr. Prosecutor, that I should have watched Hitler die and not lifted a finger. But the entire working class would have died with him!
Even Marxists recognized Hitler's success, and their own failure. In the June 1934 issue of the Zeitschrift fï¿½r Sozialismus, the journal of the German Social Democrats in exile, this acknowledgement appears:
Faced with the despair of proletarians reduced to joblessness, of young people with diplomas and no future, of the middle classes of merchants and artisans condemned to bankruptcy, and of farmers terribly threatened by the collapse in agricultural prices, we all failed. We weren't capable of offering the masses anything but speeches about the glory of socialism.
VI. The Social Revolution
Hitler's tremendous social achievement in putting Germany's six million unemployed back to work is seldom acknowledged today. Although it was much more than a transitory achievement, "democratic" historians routinely dismiss it in just a few lines. Since 1945, not a single objective scholarly study has been devoted to this highly significant, indeed unprecedented, historical phenomenon.
Similarly neglected is the body of sweeping reforms that dramatically changed the condition of the worker in Germany. Factories were transformed from gloomy caverns to spacious and healthy work centers, with natural lighting, surrounded by gardens and playing fields. Hundreds of thousands of attractive houses were built for working class families. A policy of several weeks of paid vacation was introduced, along with week and holiday trips by land and sea. A wide-ranging program of physical and cultural education for young workers was established, with the world's best system of technical training. The Third Reich's social security and workers' health insurance system was the world's most modern and complete.

This remarkable record of social achievement is routinely hushed up today because it is embarrasses those who uphold the orthodox view of the Third Reich. Otherwise, readers might begin to think that perhaps Hitler was the greatest social builder of the twentieth centuryï¿½
Nevertheless, restoring work and bread to millions of unemployed who had been living in misery for years; restructuring industrial life; conceiving and establishing an organization for the effective defense and betterment of the nation's millions of wage earners; creating a new bureaucracy and judicial system that guaranteed the civic rights of each member of the national community, while simultaneously holding each person to his or her responsibilities as a German citizen: this organic body of reforms was part of a single, comprehensive plan, which Hitler had conceived and worked out years earlier.
Without this plan, the nation would have collapsed into anarchy. All-encompassing, this program included broad industrial recovery as well as detailed attention to even construction of comfortable inns along the new highway network.
It took several years for a stable social structure to emerge from the French Revolution. The Soviets needed even more time: five years after the Bolshevik revolution of 1917, hundreds of thousands of Russians were still dying of hunger and disease. In Germany, by contrast, the great machinery was in motion within months, with organization and accomplishment quickly meshing togetherï¿½
Hitler personally dug the first spadeful of earth for the first Autobahn highway, linking Frankfurt-am-Main with Darmstadt. For the occasion, he brought along Dr. Schacht, the man whose visionary credit wizardry had made the project possible. The official procession moved ahead, three cars abreast in front, then six across, spanning the entire width of the autobahnï¿½
Hitler's plan to build thousands of low-cost homes also demanded a vast mobilization of manpower. He had envisioned housing that would be attractive, cozy, and affordable for millions of ordinary German working-class families. He had no intention of continuing to tolerate, as his predecessors had, cramped, ugly "rabbit warren" housing for the German people. The great barracks-like housing projects on the outskirts of factory towns, packed with cramped families, disgusted him.
The greater part of the houses he would build were single story, detached dwellings, with small yards where children could romp, wives could grow vegetable and flower gardens, while the bread-winners could read their newspapers in peace after the day's work. These single-family homes were built to conform to the architectural styles of the various German regions, retaining as much as possible the charming local variants.

Wherever there was no practical alternative to building large apartment complexes, Hitler saw to it that the individual apartments were spacious, airy and enhanced by surrounding lawns and gardens where the children could play safely.
The new housing was, of course, built in conformity with the highest standards of public health, a consideration notoriously neglected in previous working-class projects.
Generous loans, amortizable in ten years, were granted to newly married couples so they could buy their own homes. At the birth of each child, a fourth of the debt was cancelled. Four children, at the normal rate of a new arrival every two and a half years, sufficed to cancel the entire loan debt.
Once, during a conversation with Hitler, I expressed my astonishment at this policy. "But then, you never get back the total amount of your loans?," I asked. "How so?" he replied, smiling. "Over a period of ten years, a family with four children brings in much more than our loans, through the taxes levied on a hundred different items of consumption."
As it happened, tax revenues increased every year, in proportion to the rise in expenditures for Hitler's social programs. In just a few years, revenue from taxes tripled. Hitler's Germany never experienced a financial crisis.
To stimulate the moribund economy demanded the nerve, which Hitler had, to invest money that the government didn't yet have, rather than passively waiting-in accordance with "sound" financial principles-for the economy to revive by itself.
Today, our whole era is dying economically because we have succumbed to fearful hesitation. Enrichment follows investment, not the other way aroundï¿½
Even before the year 1933 had ended, Hitler had succeeded in building 202,119 housing units. Within four years he would provide the German people with nearly a million and a half (1,458,128) new dwellings!
Moreover, workers would no longer be exploited as they had been. A month's rent for a worker could not exceed 26 marks, or about an eighth of the average wage then. Employees with more substantial salaries paid monthly rents of up to 45 marks maximum.
Equally effective social measures were taken in behalf of farmers, who had the lowest incomes. In 1933 alone 17,611 new farm houses were built, each of them surrounded by a parcel of land one thousand square meters in size. Within three years, Hitler would build 91,000 such farmhousesï¿½
Everywhere industry was hiring again, with some firms-like Krupp, IG Farben and the large automobile manufacturers-taking on new workers on a very large scale. As the country became more prosperous, car sales increased by more than 80,000 units in 1933 alone. Employment in the auto industry doubled. Germany was gearing up for full production, with private industry leading the way.
The new government lavished every assistance on the private sector, the chief factor in employment as well as production. Hitler almost immediately made available 500 million marks in credits to private business.

This start-up assistance given to German industry would repay itself many times over. Soon enough, another two billion marks would be loaned to the most enterprising companies. Nearly half would go into new wages and salaries, saving the treasury an estimated three hundred million marks in unemployment benefits. Added to the hundreds of millions in tax receipts spurred by the business recovery, the state quickly recovered its investment, and more.
Hitler's entire economic policy would be based on the following equation: risk large sums to undertake great public works and to spur the renewal and modernization of industry, then later recover the billions invested through invisible and painless tax revenues. It didn't take long for Germany to see the results of Hitler's recovery formula.
Economic recovery, as important as it was, nevertheless wasn't Hitler's only objective. As he strived to restore full employment, Hitler never lost sight of his goal of creating a organization powerful enough to stand up to capitalist owners and managers, who had shown little concern for the health and welfare of the entire national community.
Hitler would impose on everyone-powerful boss and lowly wage earner alike-his own concept of the organic social community. Only the loyal collaboration of everyone could assure the prosperity of all classes and social groups.
Consistent with their doctrine, Germany's Marxist leaders had set class against class, helping to bring the country to the brink of economic collapse. Deserting their Marxist unions and political parties in droves, most workers had come to realize that strikes and grievances their leaders incited only crippled production, and thus the workers as well.
By the of 1932, in any case, the discredited labor unions were drowning in massive debt that realistically could never be repaid. Some of the less scrupulous union officials, sensing the oncoming catastrophe, had begun stealing hundreds of thousands of marks from the workers they represented. The Marxist leaders had failed: socially, financially and morally.
Every joint human activity requires a leader. The head of a factory or business is also the person naturally responsible for it. He oversees every aspect of production and work. In Hitler's Germany, the head of a business had to be both a capable director and a person concerned for the social justice and welfare of his employees. Under Hitler, many owners and managers who had proven to be unjust, incompetent or recalcitrant lost their jobs, or their businesses.
A considerable number of legal guarantees protected the worker against any abuse of authority at the workplace. Their purpose was to insure that the rights of workers were respected, and that workers were treated as worthy collaborators, not just as animated tools. Each industrialist was legally obliged to collaborate with worker delegates in drafting shop regulations that were not imposed from above but instead adapted to each business enterprise and its particular working conditions. These regulations had to specify "the length of the working day, the time and method of paying wages, and the safety rules, and to be posted throughout the factory," within easy access of both the worker whose interests might be angered and the owner or manager whose orders might be subverted.

The thousands of different, individual versions of such regulations served to create a healthy rivalry, with every factory group vying to outdo the others in efficiency and justice.

One of the first reforms to benefit German workers was the establishment of paid vacations. In France, the leftist Popular Front government would noisily claim, in 1936, to have originated legally mandated paid vacations-and stingy ones at that, only one week per year. But it was actually Hitler who first established them, in 1933 -- and they were two or three times more generous.

Under Hitler, every factory employee had the legal right to paid vacation. Previously, paid vacations had not normally exceed four or five days, and nearly half of the younger workers had no vacation time at all. If anything, Hitler favored younger workers; the youngest workers received more generous vacations. This was humane and made sense: a young person has more need of rest and fresh air to develop his maturing strength and vigor. Thus, they enjoyed a full 18 days of paid vacation per year.

Today, more than half a century later, these figures have been surpassed, but in 1933 they far exceeded European norms.

The standard vacation was twelve days. Then, from the age of 25 on, it went up to 18 days. After ten years with the company, workers got a still longer vacation: 21 days, or three times what the French socialists would grant the workers of their country in 1936.

Hitler introduced the standard forty-hour work week in Europe. As for overtime work, it was now compensated, as nowhere else in the continent at the time, at an increased pay rate. And with the eight-hour work day now the norm, overtime work became more readily available.

In another innovation, work breaks were made longer: two hours each day, allowing greater opportunity for workers to relax, and to make use of the playing fields that large industries were now required to provide.

Whereas a worker's right to job security had been virtually non-existent, now an employee could no longer be dismissed at the sole discretion of the employer. Hitler saw to it that workers' rights were spelled out and enforced. Henceforth, an employer had to give four weeks notice before firing an employee, who then had up to two months to appeal the dismissal. Dismissals could also be annulled by the "Courts of Social Honor" (Ehrengerichte).

This Court was one of three great institutions that were established to protect German workers. The others were the "Labor Commissions" and the "Council of Trust."

The "Council of Trust" (Vertrauensrat) was responsible for establishing and developing a real spirit of community between management and labor. "In every business enterprise," the 1934 "Labor Charter" law stipulated, "the employer and head of the enterprise (Fï¿½hrer), the employees and workers, personnel of the enterprise, shall work jointly toward the goal of the enterprise and the common good of the nation."

No longer would either be exploited by the other-neither the worker by arbitrary whim of the employer, nor the employer through the blackmail of strikes for political ends.
Article 35 of the "Labor Charter" law stated: "Every member of an enterprise community shall assume the responsibility required by his position in said common enterprise." In short, each enterprise would be headed by a dynamic executive, charged with a sense of the greater community-no longer a selfish capitalist with unconditional, arbitrary power.
"The interest of the community may require that an incapable or unworthy employer be relieved of his duties," the "Labor Charter" stipulated. The employer was no longer unassailable, an all-powerful boss with the last word on hiring and firing his staff. He, too, would be subject to the workplace regulations, which he was now obliged to respect no less than the least of his employees. The law conferred the honor and responsibility of authority on the employer only insofar as he merited itï¿½
In the Third Reich, the worker knew that "exploitation of his physical strength in bad faith or in violation of his honor" was no longer tolerated. He had obligations to the community, but he shared these obligations with every other member of the enterprise, from the chief executive to the messenger boy. Finally, the German worker had clearly defined social rights, which were arbitrated and enforced by independent agencies. And while all this had been achieved in an atmosphere of justice and moderation, it nevertheless constituted a genuine social revolutionï¿½
Factories and shops, large and small, were altered or transformed to conform to the strictest standards of cleanliness and hygiene: interiors, so often dark and stifling, were opened up to light; playing fields were constructed; rest areas where workers could unbend during break, were set aside; employee cafeterias and respectable locker rooms were opened. The larger industrial establishments, in addition to providing the normally required conventional sports facilities, were obliged to put in swimming pools!
In just three years, these achievements would reach unimagined heights: more than two thousand factories refitted and beautified; 23,000 work premises modernized; 800 buildings designed exclusively for meetings; 1,200 playing fields; 13,000 sanitary facilities; 17,000 cafeterias.
To assure the healthy development of the working class, physical education courses were instituted for younger workers. Some 8,000 were eventually organized. Technical training was equally emphasized. Hundreds of work schools, and thousands of technical courses were created. There were examinations for professional competence, and competitions in which generous prizes were awarded to outstanding masters of their craft.

Eight hundred departmental inspectors and 17,300 local inspectors were employed to conscientiously monitor and promote these improvements.
To provide affordable vacations for German workers on a hitherto unprecedented scale, Hitler established the "Strength through Joy" program. As a result, hundreds of thousands of workers were now able to make relaxing vacation trips on land and sea each summer.
Magnificent cruise ships were built, and special trains brought vacationers to the mountains and the seashore. In just a few years, Germany's working-class tourists would log a distance equivalent to 54 times the circumference of the earth! And thanks to generous state subsidies, the cost to workers of these popular vacation excursions was nearly insignificantï¿½
Was Hitler's transformation of the lot of the working class authoritarian? Without a doubt. And yet, for a people that had grown sick and tired of anarchy, this new authoritarianism wasn't regarded as an imposition. In fact, people have always accepted a strong man's leadership.
In any case, there is no doubt that the attitude of the German working class, which was still two-thirds non-Nazi at the start of 1933, soon changed completely. As Belgian author Marcel Laloire noted at the time:
When you make your way through the cities of Germany and go into the working-class districts, go through the factories, the construction yards, you are astonished to find so many workers on the job sporting the Hitler insignia, to see so many flags with the swastika, black on a bright red background, in the most densely populated districts.
Hitler's "German Labor Front" (Deutsche Arbeitsfront), which incorporated all workers and employers, was for the most part eagerly accepted. The steel spades of the sturdy young lads of the "National Labor Service" (Reichsarbeitsdienst) could also be seen gleaming along the highways.
Hitler created the National Labor Service not only to alleviate unemployment, but to bring together, in absolute equality, and in the same uniform, both the sons of millionaires and the sons of the poorest families for several months' common labor and living.
All performed the same work, all were subject to the same discipline; they enjoyed the same pleasures and benefited from the same physical and moral development. At the same construction sites and in the same barracks, Germans became conscious of what they had in common, grew to understand one another, and discarded their old prejudices of class and caste.
After a hitch in the National Labor Service, a young worker knew that the rich man's son was not a pampered monster, while the young lad of wealthy family knew that the worker's son had no less honor than a nobleman or an heir to riches; they had lived and worked together as comrades. Social hatred was vanishing, and a socially united people was being born.
Hitler could go into factories-something few men of the so-called Right would have risked in the past-and hold forth to crowds of workers, at times in the thousands, as at the huge Siemens works. "In contrast to the von Papens and other country gentlemen," he might tell them, "in my youth I was a worker like you. And in my heart of hearts, I have remained what I was then."

During his twelve years in power, no untoward incident ever occurred at any factory he visited. Hitler was at home when he went among the people, and he was received like a member of the family returning home after making a success of himself.
But the Chancellor of the Third Reich wanted more than popular approval. He wanted that approval to be freely, widely, and repeatedly expressed by popular vote. No people was ever be more frequently asked for their electoral opinion than the German people of that era-five times in five years.
For Hitler, it was not enough that the people voted from time to time, as in the previous democratic system. In those days, voters were rarely appealed to, and when they expressed an opinion, they were often ill-informed and apathetic. After an election, years might go by, during which the politicians were heedless and inaccessible, the electorate powerless to vote on their actions.
To enable the German public to express its opinion on the occasion of important events of social, national, or international significance, Hitler provided the people a new means of approving or rejecting his own actions as Chancellor: the plebiscite.
Hitler recognized the right of all the people, men and women alike, to vote by secret ballot: to voice their opinion of his policies, or to make a well-grounded judgment on this or that great decision in domestic or foreign affairs. Rather than a formalistic routine, democracy became a vital, active program of supervision that was renewed annually.
The articles of the "Plebiscite Law" were brief and clear:
1. The Reich government may ask the people whether or not it approves of a measure planned by or taken by the government. This may also apply to a law.
2. A measure submitted to plebiscite will be considered as established when it receives a simple majority of the votes. This will apply as well to a law modifying the Constitution.
3. If the people approves the measure in question, it will be applied in conformity with article III of the Law for Overcoming the Distress of the People and the Reich.
The Reich Interior Ministry is authorized to take all legal and administrative measures necessary to carry out this law.
Berlin, July 14, 1933.
Hitler, Frickï¿½
From the first months of 1933, his accomplishments were public fact, for all to see. Before end of the year, unemployment in Germany had fallen from more than 6,000,000 to 3,374,000. Thus, 2,627,000 jobs had been created since the previous February, when Hitler began his "gigantic task!" A simple question: Who in Europe ever achieved similar results in so short a time?ï¿½
In his detailed and critical biography of Hitler, Joachim Fest limited his treatment of Hitler's extraordinary social achievements in 1933 to a few paragraphs. All the same, Fest did not refrain from acknowledging:

The regime insisted that it was not the rule of one social class above all others, and by granting everyone opportunities to rise, it in fact demonstrated class neutrality-These measures did indeed break through the old, petrified social structures. They tangibly improved the material condition of much of the population. (J. Fest, Hitler, pp. 434-435.)
Not without reason were the swastika banners waving proudly throughout the working-class districts where, just a year ago, they had been unceremoniously torn down.

You have to understand: Mark is using "OT" as an excuse to trash your subject line. He doesn't care one iota about the news group, except that he wants to trash it. As he has stated in his blog at the URI http://khkb9rqz.blogspot.com/2007/12/sadly-for-rrap.html

This link is to a photo of George Thurner, W8FWG. George happens to be just one of the Hams whose call sign Mark forged.
Other calls he used were, N8KSO, W9VLM, and WA8QNF.

You said my goal was to cause pain and suffering. I just wanted to know where you get your information because it is news to me. My goal is to make you dance...I've changed the tune many times and you keep on dancing. Fools fool.

Steve never mentioned his daughter to garner anything until somebody went to QRZ and lifted the info from his bio. So your arguement is flawed Markie.

Another stupid response from Mark, as expected when Mark's rationale hits a dead end, he just spews more of his retarded crap. BTW if there was someone who had nothing to lose, did not like me, and knew where I lived, it would not be in my best interest to tell him you want to help him die. The reverse could happen and that would not be a shame...I mean would be a shame....well.....................

Frank was excited about his new rifle and decided to try bear hunting.

He travelled up to Alaska, spotted a small brown bear and shot it.

Soon after there was a tap on his shoulder, and he turned around to see a big black bear.

The black bear said, "That was a very bad mistake. That was my cousin. I'm going to give you two choices. Either I maul you to death or we have sex."

After considering briefly, Frank decided to accept the latter alternative. So the black bear had his way with Frank.

Even though he felt sore for two weeks, Frank soon recovered and vowed revenge.

He headed out on another trip to Alaska where he found the black bear and shot it dead. Right after, there was another tap on his shoulder.

This time a huge grizzly bear stood right next to him.

The grizzly said, "That was a big mistake, Frank. That was my cousin and you've got two choices: Either I maul you to death or we have "rough sex."

Again, Frank thought it was better to cooperate with the grizzly bear than be mauled to death. So the grizzly had his way with Frank.

Although he survived, it took several months before Frank fully recovered.

Now Frank was completely outraged, so he headed back to Alaska and managed to track down the grizzly bear and shot it.

He felt sweet revenge, but then, moments later, there was a tap on is shoulder. He turned around to find a giant polar bear standing there.

The polar bear looked at him and said, "Admit it Frank, you don't come here for the hunting, do you?"

'Twas brillig.

Mark twists everything into being about himself, even a joke about bears.

He also tried to change the subject line again - a symptom of his hostility toward all.

So far, he has heeded Hughes' warning and has not been flooding the group, but it's only a matter of time until his emotions take over and he resumes his old, antisocial flooding behavior.

At that time, we'll finish the job of getting him off this newsgroup.

Baxter Issues Urgent Nationwide Voluntary Recall of Heparin 1,000 Units/ml
10 and 30ml Multi-Dose Vials (Jan. 25)
Tue, 29 Jan 2008 06:42:00 -0600

Baxter Healthcare Corporation has announced the voluntary recall of nine lots of heparin sodium injection 1000 units/mL 10mL and 30mL multi-dose vials. The company began recalling the lots on January 17, 2008 as a precautionary measure due to an increase in the number of reports of adverse patient reactions that may be associated with the product. Baxter is conducting a thorough investigation of these reports to identify the cause of the increase in allergic-type reactions.

you /channel cop are guy that insist on posting sex stuff to RRAP

the question remains what has my sex life to do with RADIO what has sex with BEARS to do with RADIO

I have tried answering your questions here but I don't introduce sex to the NG

prevert that SUPPORTS beaty sex posting

answer NOTHING

you post that that makes you wrong

what I may or may not have posted in another NG has little if anything to do with RRAP

Your older post was "the act of a jerk and prevert [sic]" and so you are a hypocrite when you say that about someone else.

And why don't you just leave other posters alone? You are not the controller and arbiter of the radio news groups. Butting in on posts in a vain attempt at censorship (as you frequently do) is also "the act of a jerk." It is in fact why you are so reviled by other users. If you butted into a conversation in that way in a public place, someone would punch you in the face.

The good thing is that you have been shut down enough that a kill file will take care of you nicely. You can no longer mount denial of service attacks on usenet servers by posting a thousand or more posts in a day, and for that we thank Teranews.

Why don't you go jogging on an interstate somewhere? That would make us all feel better.

again showing that you are a Complete LID - the information presented in the original posting was to help anyone that might be using the RECALLED product that hadn't been notified previously.
And of course you have gone ahead and changed the subject line to something of no value!

The last one by Dave Barry is good.
"I wrote not long ago about Bill as the 'Clinton Albatross,' but now it is more apt to compare him to an attack dog unleashed. His (not her) victory speech in Nevada was quite extraordinary: He went on and on, while she stood next to him, mute. He gloated over her comeback, took digs at the other candidates, referenced himself of course, and was reluctant to give up his iron grip on the microphone...Bill's ubiquity on the campaign-sharp partisan attacks and caricatures, misinformation about his own record, fiery outbursts to reporters-is quite unprecedented for an emeritus president, especially one who had so carefully cultivated his image as a global insider and international humanitarian. If between 2001 and 2008 the Clinton legacy was something to be defended by all Democrats, Hillary's candidacy and Bill's unseemly behavior are calling it into question. Who knows-soon Democrats themselves, either Obama supporters or disillusioned Clintonites, may grudgingly concede to critics, 'Yeah, you were right about that guy all along.' If Bill keeps up the attack on Obama, he may become the first unblack president." -Victor Davis Hanson

"For a couple of hundred years, foreigners have been flocking to the shores of this most welcoming of nations. They would bring along their art and music along with their cuisine, but they adapted their ways in order that their children and their children s children would acclimate and be full-fledged Americans... But somewhere along the way, there was a sea change. Now we have that oddest of strange creatures known as the dual citizen and we have millions of people living here who apparently have no particular loyalty to this country and are being encouraged to retain their own language and their old ways. 'Press one for Spanish, two for English' has become commonplace. Teenagers who have never even set foot in Mexico, Salvador and Guatemala, demonstrate in our streets while carrying foreign flags, and we re all supposed to respect them or be labeled as bigots and xenophobes. American citizens who are being taxed to death to support illegal aliens are called racists if they object to footing the bill for health care and education for millions of freeloading ingrates who insist they re only reclaiming land that is rightfully theirs. On top of all that, our kids are being brainwashed in their schools into accepting that the only truly evil society on the face of the earth isn't North Korea, Iran, China or Syria, but their own...[T]olerance is the greatest of all virtues, but only so long as it s not tolerance of anything American." -Burt Prelutsky

"Once the government gains control over energy decisions, do we really think they will relinquish it after manmade global warming is realized to be a false alarm? It has been said that whoever controls energy, controls life. Right now, the free market (which means you) controls those decisions. Do we need to remind ourselves how well things went in the former Soviet Union when the bureaucrats made the economic decisions, rather than letting the collective will of the people, expressed though a free market, govern the economy?... What will people do when they realize that going along with the 56-percent scientific majority has resulted in them giving up much of their personal freedom in the process? I wouldn't trade that freedom for any presidential candidate." -climatologist Roy Spencer

"On Tuesday, millions of Florida voters will head for the polls. Being Floridians, many of them will become confused and drive into buildings, canals, cemeteries, other Floridians, etc. But some will actually make it to the polls, where they will cast ballots that will play a crucial role in the presidential election. Or, in the case of Democrats, not. It turns out that the 2008 Florida Democratic primary doesn't count. Florida will be sending the same number of delegates to the 2008 Democratic convention as Uzbekistan. This may seem unfair, but there's a simple, logical explanation: The whole primary system is insane. Consider the process so far: First, Iowa held 'caucuses,' in which Iowans gathered in small groups at night and engaged in some mysterious Iowan ritual that for all we know involves having intimate relations with corn. Right after that, Wyoming had a primary, but it was only for Republicans, because Wyoming Democrats (apparently, there are at least two) will hold their primary on March 8. Most of the candidates ignored Wyoming and focused on the New Hampshire primary, except Rudy Giuliani, who's following a shrewd strategy, originally developed by the Miami Dolphins, of not entering the race until he has been mathematically eliminated. After New Hampshire came Michigan, where the ballot listed all the Republicans, but only certain Democrats-including Chris Dodd, who had already dropped out of the race-but not including Barack Obama or John Edwards. After Michigan came the Nevada caucuses, in which Hillary Clinton got more votes but Barack Obama got more delegates. (If you don't understand how that could happen, then you have never been to a casino.) Then came the South Carolina Republican primary, which of course was not held on the same day as the South Carolina Democratic primary, which was Saturday. Then comes Florida, in which Republican voters will elect some delegates, although the total will only be half the number Florida was originally supposed to get. Meanwhile, Florida Democrats, as I mentioned, will have the same impact on their party's nomination as if they fed their ballots to ducks. I am not making any of this up: This is our actual primary system, except (I hope) the part about the corn. We're selecting candidates for the most important job in the world via a process that's less rational than the one used to choose Miss Kumquat of Pasco County." -Dave Barry

these new feedback rules. Like I said long ago, E-Bay could care less about Buyers and does everything to kiss Seller's collective tuckus since this is where they have their bread buttered. E-Screw can go to hell for all I care. Same thing goes for Paypal, the USA's only non-regulated online financial institution which is the preffered medium for money transfers between Al-Quaada and other terrorists.

I imagine sellers like Radiomart and Gottahaveit1985 should just love
these new feedback rules. Like I said long ago, E-Bay could care less about Buyers and
does everything to kiss Seller's collective tuckus since this is where they have their bread buttered.

I guess you didn't read any of the new rules, there are over sixty pages of angry posts on eBay's own forums and everyone sees this as the seller getting screwed mostly.

On the contrary, I'd much rather be a buyer than a seller under the new rules. I doubt I will quit buying as long as I can find bargains, but I'm far less interested in selling anymore with how much they skim off the top.

It's always instructive to compare eBay commissions with those of traditional auction houses. They typically take 20-25% off the top. One of the local houses just raised its rates to 35% on items selling for under $200.

Might be why I haven't seen or even heard of a traditional auction in the area in years. My grandpa used to take me to them when I was a little kid, then one went under so we changed to another, then that one went under and we changed to another, then that one went under. That was all back before anyone had even heard of the internet.

Point taken, Mike, but eBay has much lower overhead. they don't have to provide a physical location or a live human auctioneer.

Ah is this your local auctioneer that spends his money for advertising and his people or he himself gets the stuff all in order to sell... comes and picks it up.. hauls it to his auction house.. then gets up there and sells it? ...Sorry but thats NOT a fair comparison to the service that FleaBay offers...

With FleaBay your at about 15% or so for low priced radios that only includes the ebay and paypal costs... add in the packing materials and it gets to be more yet... don't want to hear you say... YaBut you add for the packing on top of the bid... don't think so... all you really did was cut the bid as the buyer is only looking at the total cost... bid+pak+ship

We should at this time of year be seeing increases in quantity listed.. Be real interesting to watch the month of March and April...

I agree, selling low end stuff on eBay is not a great way to make money, and never has been, except maybe those rare "hit the lottery" sales when buyers go nuts and overpay for something. Otherwise, it's just too much work to make it worthwhile.

Their fees are much more reasonable for higher priced goods. If you sell something in the hundreds, your costs are down around 7.5% (including PayPal), which is quite reasonable, considering the worldwide exposure eBay gives you. The upcoming fee hike in the $25-$1000 range is 0.25%.

The nice thing about a live auction, as a seller, is that the stuff never comes back, it's gone forever. No feedback, no chargebacks, no nit picking, no griping!

. Same
thing goes
for Paypal, the USA's only non-regulated online financial institution
which is
the preffered medium for money transfers between Al-Quaada and other terrorists.

without defending either business, do you have any facts to back up what might seem to be libellous? Where is the use of paypal to transfer money to or from AlQuaeda documented? Where can I read this with verifiable backup data?

odd, over all my sales, the ebay fees are around 8 percent - I wonder what you do differently? Paypal costs are around 4% - but not everyone uses paypal, and there are some real savings to it (like actually getting paid promptly)

Yep, they have us by the short hairs, and this will be the case until something better comes along, which aint likely.

Name another website where the average person selling items can get as much exposure, as easily, and in most cases get as much for his / her items? If one existed, I am sure eBay would be more competitive.

It does not, and they are not...

Can I jump in here and say what great auctions Rich ESTES has (and does for radio clubs like MARC as well). If you can get over to his OHIO locations, they are still great auctions several times a year!

His site has the next auction listed PLUS several special past ones... with many pictures! Rich archives these as a service to collectors. Go here: www.estesauctions.com

I notice he is now charging a 5% fee to the buyer.

Still a great way to buy radios. Normally he does about 5-8 large radio auctions a year. This past year, and I think this upcoming Extravaganza in Lansing, Rich will bring up to 50 radios into our regular club auction to augment it.

The one and only negative I have came from a nonpaying putz who no longer is a member- at least with that user id. The new rule will marginally help me there. Having worked for a large corporation once, I know that *bay's moves are carefully calculated to enhance their bottom line. Any collateral damage is not that important since collateral damage is taken into account when all these changes are made. No doubt the biggest sellers will have the greatest voice. The little guys will get squeezed out just like at the local flea market that has been overrun with pros selling imported kitsch.

The government today announced that it is changing its emblem from an Eagle to a CONDOM because it more accurately reflects the government's political stance. A condom allows for inflation, halts production, destroys the next generation, protects a bunch of pricks, and gives you a sense of security while you're actually being screwed!

Nationwide Recall of NuCel Labs Eye Drops and Eye/Ear Wash Products (Jan. 29) Wed, 30 Jan 2008 12:30:00 -0600

NuCel Labs of Idaho Falls, Idaho announced today that it is conducting a voluntary nationwide recall of all Eye Drops and Eye/Ear Wash. This recall follows an FDA inspection in which product testing indicated that there was bacteria and particulate matter in the product deeming these products non-sterile. Non-sterile eye drops pose an unacceptable risk of causing eye infections, which in rare cases could lead to blindness.

no, it is because moparhoLICK wants a pekker, dummy

What's your problem? You really have some mental issues. It's been posted
that you are a Ham # N8WWM, you go to CB newsgroups and act like this?? Why would anyone want to become a Amateur radio op if this is the type of people you'll meet?

Posting to Newsgroups

When posting any message to a newsgroup, subscribers are responsible for compliance with the policies of the newsgroup. Many newsgroups prohibit the posting of advertisements, solicitations, other commercial messages, large or binary files, and other material.

Subscribers may not attempt to circumvent the approval process for posting to a newsgroup. Posting the same or similar message to more than 9 newsgroups is prohibited. Flooding or otherwise disrupting a newsgroup is prohibited. Disruption is defined as intentionally interfering with the normal exchange of messages or information in the group. Non-interactive clients which download Usenet articles in bulk are prohibited.

Buckeye reserves the right to discontinue access to any newsgroup at any time for any reason.

If I understand you're ramblings, you are accusing me of stalking (of course that's one of your favorite sayings). Not hardly, I post how often Mark? Once maybe twice a week? I have complained about this guy how many times Mark? Once? Twice? Have I gone to other newsgroups and made a single post in reference to him? You? Anyone else?
Your just pissed because I cross posted this and have gotten on your case for doing the very same thing. Difference is that I have only done it once, while you have done it THOUSANDS OF TIMES!!! Saying things like "Fake", "Get Kelp", some 50 to 100 times a day. That's the reason you lost your posting privileges on TeraNews.
Same time, I think the amateur community should know what one of their own is acting like. It does not shine well to others if they are considering going to test for the exam, if this is what they will be expecting from the amateur radio service..

Doesn't SPAM come in cans?

Not selling any thing here - just passing a warning on to the public!

1568. Why does Mark forge emails to himself of pimped out kids, claim not to attack, and then deny that he mentioned "dloyd"?

Whoa! Be careful! This is Mark's group...didn't you know that? HE gets to decide what is on topic here and HE gets to define what is and what is not spam. And of course only HE can flood 200-300 times a day because, you see, in his fantasy world he is "defending" himself.
Oh, wait! He can't flood anymore, can he? Not since Teranews bounced him.
Now he has to resort to several Google accounts to make his otherworldly comments and Google limits him.
The great plus to this is that if one adds a very small graphic to the post, Google won't allow Mark to view the post since Google "sees" it a binary.
Mark, therefore, cannot see it.
Good riddance.

AGAIN SHIT FOR BRAINS! -
1- I have had others come back with positive comments thanking me for making these posts - since you don't post anything here relating to the NG - HAHAHA - YOU FOR 1 SHOULD KEEP YOU COMMENTS TO YOUR SELF ABOUT OT POSTINGS!

2- There is nothing in my post ABOUT THIS SUBJECT that is harassing you your thread jacking for one.

your homosexual agenda you attempt to force on the entire news group.
your continued off topic spamming.
your cross posting to unrelated groups.
your continued floods of nonsense.
your preoccupation with child pornography.
your preoccupation with bestiality.

of course I could go on, but point made.

I generally like Paypal, but for things over a couple hundred dollars, I won't use it, the percentage they take is just too great. It stinks for very small amounts too, I had someone send me a buck for postage, and Paypal skimmed off 33 cents! Sure it isn't much money, but it's 1/3 of what they sent! It irritates the heck out of me on principal.

Well it depends on the price of the items your selling. Saw something that said... 8.75% to ebay for items in the 25 buck range. Now if that item is 25 bucks for the auction price and the shipping on it is also 25 bucks. Now your going to get 50 bucks into your paypal account. Paypal gets its 3% from the WHOLE transaction. So that becomes 6% of the actual 25 buck bid price. making you now OVER 15% add in the 25 cents in addition to the 3% or if its an international sale then PayPal becomes 5% ... which would be 10% plus a quarter on the 25 buck auction... but since its now an International Auction the shipping is no longer 25 bucks now its maybe $100 shipping... so PayPal becomes 5% of $125 ... or $6.50 add in the 8.75% that ebay got is $2.19 for a fee total of $8.69 for your total cost on the 25 buck auction.... guess that makes this one about a 34% total cost of sale.... would be better off just donating that item to Goodwill and take tax deduction me thinks.

Sure Markie..Bwahahahah! Your 12+ new "dloyd" rants says otherwise, and the fact that you seem to think that I am everyone who is posting on RRAP shows that your mental state has deteriorated further.

Seek help with your Dloyd obsession, depression, and abnormal sexual faggotry.

Poor Mark, gets himself all worked up by a complete stranger. Fools no I have not I rarely if ever ADD a crosspost you seem to do with almost every post you make

See above on Google Search, never ever have I added a newsgroup to an existing thread until that ONE!!! You on the other hand have hundreds of times. Say all you want Mark, Google doesn't lie about that when you do a little research on your posting habits.

LOL!!!! You are like this kid I went to school with in Mayberry R.F.D. Every time someone even said something that he didn't like, he went crying to the teacher, bemoaning "their picking on me". Well all it took was more than a few times and the teacher told him to learn to live with it (using stick & stones theory) and that if you went around crying about every little thing, you're life
was going to be unbearable.

Mark said in response to poster "Gomer Pyle"....

"Inncent till proven guilty "gomer" that is why i find your nick so

Mark must of have watched way too much TV as a child and actually believes that either Jim Nabors (the actor who played Gomer Pyle) was in the service, or even more bizarre, that Gomer Pyle was a real person serving in the Marines, and a TV crew was following him around all day.
Bwahahahahaha! Morkie, Just like you, Jim Nabors has never served in the armed forces. However, unlike you he has been recognized and honored by the Corps for his acting role as Gomer Pyle. You squeaky limp wristed fool, you must have been more offensive to members of the armed forces when you were employed as a sub-contracted janitor on a military base. That is why they beat the shit out of you, gave you an acid tooth, a streched out your bung hole, and gave you that permanent twitch.
